A Grammar of the Kiwai Language, Fly Delta, Papua

By
SIDNEY H. RAY, M.A., F.R.A.I.

with a Kiwai Vocabulary

By
the late Rev. E. BAXTER RILEY
(London Missionary Society)

Port Moresby, Papua:
EDWARD GEORGE BAKER, Government Printer.
PREFACE.

IN 1893 and 1897 Dr. Haddon and I published an account of all that was then known of the languages spoken by the people of the Torres Straits Islands and the adjacent mainland of New Guinea known to the islanders as Daudai. The language described as Daudai was substantially the language also of the island of Kiwai in the Fly Delta. With this work as a foundation, during my stay with the late Rev. James Chalmers at Saguane on Kiwai Island in 1898, I made a short but intensive study of the structure of the language which was printed in the Reports of the Cambridge Anthropological Expedition in 1907. Chalmers was much interested in my work, for he regarded it as the first stage in the fulfilment of his daily prayer that the people of the Fly River might read the Gospel in their own tongue.

After the death of Chalmers there was very little opportunity for studying the language and it was not until the Rev. E. Baxter Riley was appointed to the Fly River in 1902, and had begun to learn the language that work was resumed. Mr. Riley published a small school book in 1907, and my Grammar appeared in the same year in the Cambridge Report. Then commenced a most interesting and instructive correspondence which lasted until Mr. Riley’s death in 1928. In 1908 portions of St. Mark’s Gospel began to pass to and fro, and after three years the complete Gospel was published. Mr. Riley revised this in 1917 and added St. Matthew. In 1927 the Four Gospels were completed. Thus the daily prayer of Chalmers was answered.

The grammar here presented is based upon notes and paradigms supplied to me by Mr. Riley or evolved in the course of our correspondence, with examples drawn from the Scriptures or from Folk tales written by natives.
Preface.

Though the material was supplied by Mr. Riley, he left to me the arrangement and elucidation of the complicated grammar. My task was only rendered possible by Mr. Riley's unceasing collection of facts, and his care to ensure that those facts were accurate. I can join with his teachers in saying, "He worked with his might and main through the heat of the sun and through cold, often staying up late through the night working in his study. Really he did a lot for us."

INTRODUCTION.

1. The Kiwai proper is the language spoken at Iasa, Samari, Saguane and other villages on Kiwai, a long low island on the eastern side of the southern entrance to the delta of the Fly River, Papua.

The origin of the name Kiwai is unknown. It first occurs in a list of place names in Dowdee (i.e., Daudai) which Jukes obtained from natives of Erub (Darnley Island, Torres Straits) during the visit of H.M.S. Fly in 1842-6. Daudai is the name given by the Torres Straits islanders to the mainland of New Guinea.

2. Dialects more or less related to Kiwai are spoken right across the Fly Delta from the mainland at the Binature River, to the deltas of the Bamu and Turama Rivers and the eastern mainland of the Papuan Gulf at the Gama and Era Rivers. At least six dialects are fairly well known, but others probably exist. The main dialects are:

   - Tureture, near the mouth of the Binature River. The dialect at Mawata (on the opposite side of the river), at Perem or Parama (Bampton Island, off the coast) and Sui (a village north of Perem) is the same.

   - Kiwai in the villages of Kiwai Island. This has been adopted as the standard language for mission purposes in the Delta by the London Missionary Society.

   - Domori, an island in the Fly Delta north-west of Kiwai. Pagona on the mainland opposite is the same.

   - Wabuda, an island between the eastern mouth of the Fly and the Bamu Delta. The same dialect with a very different accent is spoken at Gesoa (south coast of Wabuda) and Sagero (on mainland coast north of Wabuda).

   - Sisiami, a village on the Dibiri branch of the Bamu Delta. This represents the Bamu dialects, but there are some variations, as at Oropai, east of Sisiami, and at Pirupiru between Buniki on the Bebea branch of the Bamu Delta and the Gama River.

   - Goaribari, at Kerewa and other villages on Goaribari Island, at the mouth of the Bamu Delta.

3. The Kiwai dialects differ considerably in vocabulary and to a somewhat less extent in grammar, but they are without question members of the same linguistic group. There are also regular sound interchanges in some common words. See paragraph 7.

Languages in the Fly Delta.

4. Besides the Kiwai, other languages are spoken on the shores of the Delta which are quite distinct in grammar and vocabulary. These are:

   1. Dabu, west of Mawata.
   2. Kunini, adjacent to Mawata and Tureture.
3. Oriomo, east of Kunini.
4. Tirio, western shore of Fly River, opposite Domori Island.
5. Gogodara, inland from north shore of Fly River.

The following table shows the differences between these languages and Kiwai. The words are those of the Kiwai dialects in paragraph 4.

Mr. Riley’s vocabularies of these and other languages of Western Papua were published in "Anthropos." xxvi, 1931.

ALPHABET.

5. The Kiwai alphabet consists of seventeen letters, representing the following sounds:

- Vowels: a, e, i, o, u.
- Diphthongs: ai, au.
- Semivowel: w.
- Consonants: Velar: k, g.
  - Dental: t, d, n.
  - Labial: p, b, m.
  - Sibilant: s.
  - Spirant: v.
  - Liquid: r.

In addition, 1 has been introduced.

6. Pronunciation.

Vowels:

- a long as in "father," short as in "fat."
- e as a in "cake."
Kiwai Grammar.

i as ee in "eel."
o as o in "no."
u as oo in "noon."

Diphthongs:
ai as in "aisle."
au as ow in "cow."

When two vowels coming together are separately pronounced, a break is written between them, thus a'i, go, pronounced a I.

Consonants:
These are pronounced as in English. Some natives do not distinguish between v and w, and write tavatawa and tavatava, village; trovidiro or trowidiro, hear.

No two consonants are ever found together in a word. The semi-vowel w is often introduced between o and a, and between u and a, as, e.g., in magumoa or magumowa, inside; arua or aruwa, some.

The native names of the letters are: a, bi, di, e, ga, i, ke, mo, nu, o, pi, ro, si, ti, u, vi, wi.

Dialectical Variations.

7: The Kiwai dialects named in paragraph 2 show a few more or less regular sound changes. The following are examples:—

K is often sounded in Wabuda when absent in Kiwai, as in kobo, water; kera, fire; sakiro, leg; kikopu, fruit, for the Kiwai obo, ero, era, sairo and iopu. This occurs less often in Sisiami and Pirupiru, where saiki, sun, and miibo, heavy, represent Wabuda sariki, mikibo and Kiwai sa'i, miibo.

G is sometimes omitted in Sisiami, Pirupiru, Oropai and Goaribari when present in other dialects: Sisiami ou, go; aro, say; eba, cut down tree; abowa, split; aiwai, give, represent Kiwai ogu, arogo, egeba, abogowa and agiwa. Pirupiru, Oropai and Goaribari have ou and aro for ogu and arogo.

T occurs in Wabuda, in verb endings where other dialects have a semivowel, as in otobota, stand -up; abogota, split, for Kiwai otobowa and abogowa.

S in Tureture, Domori and Goaribari is usually represented by h, as, e.g., Tureture and Domori ohio, boy; hairo, leg; oruho, eat one; hito, basket; hepato, ear; herawo, fierce; buhere, girl, for Kiwai osio, sairo, ososo, sito, sepate, serawo, besere. The Goaribari has ohio, boy; iho, eat; hepato, ear; heawu, wild, and buhe, girl.

Kiwai s sometimes appears in Tureture as t: tutaha, armlet; ototo, to break the skull; atepu, armpit; Kiwai has susase, ososo, asesopu.

In Pirupiru often, and sometimes in Sisiami, f takes the place of s in Kiwai: Pirupiru and Sisiami oufo, eat; Pirupiru fufuwo, wind; tutafe, armlet, for the Kiwai oruso, susuwo, susase. But Sisiami has tutae for armlet.
Kiwai Grammar.

R sometimes appears in Wabuda when absent in other dialects: sariki, sun; turi, arm; pere, canoe; nekere, dung; moropo, knot, for Kiwai sa', tu, pe, ne, mopo.

In Goaribari r is omitted between two vowels: oubi, people; abea, father; mamo, mother; opu, head; iho, eat, for Kiwai arubi, abera, maramu, epuru, iriso.

Pirupiru sometimes omits r: mamu, mother; oufo, eat; but in some words Kiwai r is represented by h or w as in ohisiasi, die; tawena, holy, for tarena, holy. Sisiami has oufo for Kiwai oruso.

The pronunciation is no doubt being modified by the written literature in Kiwai. But Kiwai is itself being influenced by other dialects, by Tureture especially, and there is a tendency to use the Tureture h in Kiwai words instead of s.

Division of Words.

8. Kiwai is essentially a polysynthetic language and many words contain very many syllables. Some of these have no meaning except in composition but are often written by natives in a separate form for ease of pronunciation. In the last translation of the Gospels words are divided by hyphens. In Kiwai every word ends in a vowel.

PARTICLES OF EMPHASIS.

9. In Kiwai sentences, words appear with suffixed particles which have no distinct grammatical function, but usually serve to emphasize the word to which they are affixed. In many cases they cannot be separately translated. The particles may be added to all classes of words. Some examples are given below, others will be found in the various sections of the grammar.

10. Ro: This is often used to distinguish the most important pronoun in the sentence:
Nouro nou garapoi, he him shows, he shows him.
Nouro besereburo turudo aime gorobai, he the girl by (from) the hand then took.
Ororo ni didiri sirioro a riauri? You these men many do you see?

With mo, I, and ro, thou, the particle is often repeated:
Mororo ina nisiodiro, I when I do them.
Rororo nimo imeriai, send thou us (thou us send).

Ro is used with other words:
Interrogatives:
Ro beturoro vornomidiai? Who struck thee?
Gi oroboro beturoro widomidairi? Who shall take that woman?

Nouns:
Mororo tau nowea gi moniro werepesuai, I have found the money just lost.
Ni duburo pai atu uba era, this man is not another bad (one).
Adjectives:

Ni wadero morogido ebaido rorosiodiro? This good (thing) for me why is prepared?

Demonstratives:

Nouro ninaro aigarogo, he this said.
Ginaro ina goroporogai, when that was finished.
Inaroro wirowairi nougo, the one that believes on him.
Kaema ataro riberisiti, ata, ribouti, seed one scatters them, another gathers them.

Verbs:

Mai nemeriairo nou omona gaboito, I am sent before him on the road.
Nouro morogo numowasoro, let him follow me.
Ro pai umorogo budorudo roguro, you don’t know whence it comes.

11. Go: This is very commonly used with the plural pronouns, but is occasionally used with the singular, especially when ro is used in the same sentence. With ro and mo the words appear as rorogo and morogo.

Mo neigo narapoiwadodurumo, they tell about me (me they show continually).
Mo pai nougo, pai gi dubu nougo, I am not he, not that man.
Nigogo nou ebaido riowidiro durumo? Why do you hear him?

Go is also used with other words than pronouns:

Sirio didirigo nou obiaime gemasiorumo, many men him in vain scolded.
Nei ubi didirigo kiaurigido, they wish to see men.

Numerals:

Nou iga woodorori netewago? Will he enter twice?
Nou niriraorobo toribogo, his two sisters.
Nimoto imeime erea naugo, we two are one.

Adjectives:

Nou ipuwotatogo, he is quite clean.
Torego dau goitirumo, afraid do not become, fear not.
Nei auwoia dowago goitirumo, they became very angry.

Verbs:

Mo ereago nou, I am he.
Neito aigogurudo orovarogogo, they two went talking earnestly with one another.
Nou gedaro didiri aigaairiwotogo, he also used to kill people.
Mo pai umorogo nou, I do not know him.

Of also Future negatives, paragraph 154.

12. Ia: This suffix is very common with adjectives, but is used with other words. It may often be translated by “very,” “real,” or a similar word:
Kiwai Grammar.

Sirioia irisina, very many fishes.
Naniia, very true.
Irisinmabuia, real food.
Wibuia toboro, a very black cloud.
Iananaia sa'iwa, on the very last day.

In comparisons:
Ro igara auwoia nou soboia ? Are you very big, he very small?
Are you greater than he?
Roroia ina rerea, if it be really you.
Paia kodoroogo, not entering at all.

With pronouns:
No moroia, it is I myself.

13. Je appears equivalent to ia :
No moroie, it is my turn, said by a cricketer about to bat.
Ro umoroie nuumumabu, you certainly know all things.

14. Ime is adverbial and corresponds to the English -ly. It is the word-base of imeime, all, and intensifies an adjective:
Aborosai ubaime wereari, to-day will certainly be bad.
Didiriro pai dorogaraime koweago, a man will not receive it
(find) for nothing at all.
Nou iduduwoime goroto, he was born quite blind.
Pai moro sairoime, not only my feet.
Four saganaime viria, there are only four months.

15. I: This is also found:
Moroi gi koduro, I (am) that voice.
Nimo Aberahamo merei, we (are) Abraham’s children.
Nou umoroi imeime didiri, he knew all men.

16. E, we: This is assertive.
Mo noue, mo nouwe, I (am) he.
Nonouwe gi kunu, this is that bread.
Mo Domori dubuwe ? Am I a Domori man ?

17. I append some examples of compounds:—
Igo:
Nouigo, this is he.
Moro naniia gopé dubuigo, my real leader (front man).
Sokoigo, that is a tabu.

Iaro:
Nasiaro romidiro, one is sitting.
Mo pai nigogo eremaromai, nigo moroiaro nirimaromai, you did not choose me, I really chose you.

Iaijo:
Nouiaigo inaroro rimioguri moro waporudo, he (it is) that will come after me.
Kiwai Grammar.

Iago:
Mo pai wadeiago, I (am) not good enough.

Iaime:
God erea naniaime, God is very true.
Moro magumoa esemaiame rerea, my inside is strong, I am zealous;
Dogotaiame, now, this very moment.

18. Noun suffixes may follow any of these particles:
Nou samoiaito aime gotoboa, she with great joy then rose.
Gi tagu nouiawato, at this very time.
Eresetaito, to the very brim.

DEMONSTRATIVE WORDS.

19. Demonstrative words in Kiwai are numerous. They may be grouped according to their use as adjectives, pronouns or adverbs.

20. Simple forms:
Ni, this or these near.
No, this close by actually present or in possession.
Gi, that or those further away, distant.
Go, that or those referred to.

These are all used as adjectives before a noun:
Ni gamoda orio didiri pai umoro, this gamoda the young men do not know.
Ni dubu paina Merawe, this man’s name (is or was) Merawe.
Ni rubi auwo kirobo didiri, these people (are) great fishermen.
Gi boromo gadau, that pig ran away.
Gi dubu toribo neito Samari damerawa romidurudo, those two men lived on hill of Samari.
Gi pero ina giasitai, that canoe when it heeled over.
No irisina, this is fish.
No nou paina ni duriomoro, this (is) its name this land.
No moro uramu, this is my husband.
No ebota irisinaro? What fish is this?
Go gudu pai kiriso irisinago, that gudu (is) not an edible fish.
Go pe ere kavikavigo ina goiti, that piece of canoe then became crooked.

21. Adjectival forms:
Nidi, this, these.
Gidi, that, those, are also found preceding nouns.
Gidi totoro gorotomai moto giminiwa, that bridge rested on top of a house.
Sido aime gosiuti gidi asearo, Sido then cut up that asea (a fish).
Didiri imeime nouwa rogudurumo gidi gaboro, all men travel on that road.
Agiwai gidi, give that.
22. Other adjectival forms appear in neda, this like, such, and geda, that like, such:

- nou pai ubi neda sobo mere ata kerepesuai gido, he does not wish such little child to perish.
- Neda nuuna, this kind, like this.
- Nedu giboime emaro, do it like this.
- Mo pai kosiodiro geda tanaroro, I will not do such a thing.
- Sido geda gogu Adiri ito, just as Sido went to Adiri (in such a way as Sido went to Adiri).

23. Pronominal:

These are formed from ni and gi by addidg -na, an abbreviation of nuuna or nuunumabu. Cf. paragraphs 35, 62.

The intensive ro is usually added. Hence the words nina, ninaro, this, these; gina, ginaro, that, those:

- Nigo nina nougido dau godumorumu, do not be startled at this.
- Ninaro ina goroporigai, when this ended.
- Ninaro gorosiodiro, this was done.
- Ninaro omidai, take this.
- Gina gibotirumo kuraere sopuwato, this fell on stony ground.
- Ginaro ina goroporigai, when that finished.

24. Pronominal demonstratives are formed by combining no and go with the pronoun nou; nonou, this here, here (pointing); gonou, that there, these. These are treated as nouns:

- Nonouwa, nonowato, here, at this (place).
- Nonouto, to here, thither to this (place).
- Nonourudo, hence, from this (place).
- Gonouwa, gonowato, there, at that (place).
- Gonouto, to there, thither to that (place).
- Gonourudo, from there, thence from that (place).
- Nonouwa orowomivado, keep sitting here.
- Nonowato omibi, sit ye three here.
- Ro bedabeda rodoro nonouto? How did you enter here?
- Ro ebetwea goguro nonouto? When did you come here?
- Nei nonourudo pai kogugo nigo sapuwoito, they from here do not go to your part (or side).
- Ororo gonou rarogo, you say that.
- Nei ina gorowomi gonouwa, while they stayed there.
- Nesto gonowato romidurudo, they two stayed there.
- Daugogu gonouto, don't go there.
- Sido gonourudo aime garaurai, Sido out of that place (house) then came.

25. Adverbial demonstratives:

Although most of the foregoing demonstratives are used adverbially, others are formed by prefixing no and go to boi: noboi, here; goboi, there, yonder:

- Arua didiri noboi rorowotoi, some men are standing here.
- Ata noboi auwosa, another here is very great.
- O'o rorona noboi auto omidai, here is yours, take it.
Mo leta noboi, here (is) my letter.
Mo goboi nei siawa, I (am) there in their midst.
Nou namutu rubi goboi noumutu, his friends there with him.

26. Compounds of ni and gi with the noun ipi, place, are also used for here and there:
Mogi ipiwa nid omiri, I shall stay there (in that place).

Gi apparently enters into combination with other particles, but the words are not easily classified:
Nido, this side, in the direction of the speaker.
Gido, the farther side, the direction away from the speaker.
  Gido tamu, the far end of a house.
  Gido sapuwo, the other side of a stream.

Giato, there, at a distance.
  Giato numomi, there let him stay.
  Giato osora, look there (seek there) at a distance.
  Giato (o) wagoria, keep it yourself.

Genei is found as a contraction of go, and nei, they:
  Genei rirorudurumo potowa, those who remained on the shore.

Nita is used for here, especially in imperative phrases:
  Nita owasau tatariito, here bring it near (out of the bush).

27. The demonstrative of manner, thus, so, in this way, is gibo. It may be used with geda: gedagibo, similar to. The suffix -u always (par. 188) may be used:
  Nouro abera aime gemowameai gibou, Mai noguri, he answered his father, I will go.
  Betu giosoro gibou, nigo ebeta wimirisori, don't seek what you shall eat.
  Nou aime garogo gibou, Puai, he then said, No.
  Nigo kirodumutiwa gibou garogo, in your praying always thus say.
  Mororo didri ainiauri, gedagibo ota kasiouti, I men see, like trees walking about.

Gibo may be so added to geda.

28. The suffix -ie added to a noun or pronoun is assertive. Cf. paragraph 13:
  Natoie, that is a wound (nato).
  Padi'ie, that is a cuscus.
  No moroie, this is I.

Sometimes -i is used, especially with pronouns:
  Go ro gamoi, you are a turtle.
  Ro momoro'i, you are a dugong.

29. The ordinary pronouns of the third person singular are sometimes found as demonstratives:
  Sido gidi gama gemeserai nouto gemodurumo, that drum Sido left there they beat (nouto, there).
Kiwai Grammar.

Nouwato gamaro gedaro begube amu garogo nogido, in this place, drum likewise jews' harp again sound for him.

NOUNS.

30. Derivation:

Some nouns are primitive words:
Ota, tree; dubu, man; osio, boy; moto, house; oi, coconut.

31. In some cases the word-bases of nouns and verbs are related:

O-gom-u, cheek; o-gom-uwai, to suck; a-gum-o, to put in the mouth.
Wisa, payment; wose, loan; o-wos-a, to give.
Isisira, fishing-line; o-sisi-rai, to tie up; i-sisi, to roll fibre;
i-si-a, to spin with the hands.
Tu, arm; o-tutu-ro, to stretch out arms.
Atima, widow's head-dress; a-tim-ai, to cover.

32. There is sometimes reduplication either in noun or verb:

Dodobo, a measure; odoboa, to measure.
Bobo, water-hole; obo, water; obobo, to dig.
Oto, wooden adze; ototo, to chop with oto; otoai, to hack, etc., etc.

In a few cases nouns related to a verb begin with t-:

Totomu, an address, preaching; otomu, to reprove, denounce.
Togirio, maimed person; ogirio, to crawl on all fours.
Toto, a fallen tree; oto, to chop.

Some nouns are formed by combining two others:
Oborotama, calico, from oboro, ghost, tama, skin.
Turiko rubi, white men, i.e., tomahawk people, from turiko, tomahawk, rubi, people.

33. A gerund is formed from a verbal word-base by prefixing k-.
The word so formed may be used as a noun or adjective:

Nou kiriso, his eating; moto kididi didiri, house-building men.

Verbal derivatives may be used with k-:

Kitamudiro, teaching (atamuai, to teach; itamudiro, teach many continually); kemeiuti, judgment.

A verbal noun may be negative:

Kirisotato, fasting, from iriso, to eat.

34. Some personal nouns are shown by prefixing the gerund to another name distinguishing a person:

Keauri dubu, a look out (eauri, to see).
Kiaruguti dubu, a speaker (iaruguti, to say many things; arogo, to speak).
Karatamudiro dubu, a student; kitamudiro mere, scholar (aratamudiro, continually teach one's self; itamudiro, to learn many things continually).
Kaboduti dubu, a singer (abodo, sing).
Sometimes a simple noun is used instead of the gerund:

Piro dubu, thief (theft man); boso dubu, warrior (fight man).

The plural of dubu in such expressions is didiri. Rubi may be used collectively for "people." Orobo, woman, and Upi, women, are used for females.

The words dubu, man; didiri, men; orobo, woman; upi, women; osio, boy; besere, girl; busere, girls, when following a place name indicate a person of that place:
Iasa dubu, a man from Iasa; Samari rubi, people of Samari; Kubira didiri, Kubiri men.

35. The name of an object may be indicated by the word nuunumabu, thing, sometimes abbreviated to nuuna:
Kopirawa nuunumabu, a secret (hidden thing).
Obo kiaputi nuuna, something to draw with (water drawing thing).

Na with the same meaning is added to adjectives, pronouns and nouns:

Wadena, a good thing (wade, good); morona, mine (mo, moro, I, my); duriomorona, an earthly thing; mere wisiana, after-birth (mere, child; wisia, companion).

Gender.

36. Male and female human beings are indicated by different words:
Man, dubu; Woman, orobo.
Men, didiri; Women, upi.
Boy, osio; Girl, besere, pl. busere.
Husband, uramu, pl. uramigo; Wife, orobora, orobo, pl. upi.
Widower, sia dubu; Widow, samore.
Old man, nogere-buro, pl. nogerenogere; Old woman, abere-buro, pl. abereabere.

Sia in the word for "widower" means "one apart." It may be used with other words:
Sia orobo, a young widow; sia osio, a young widower; sia mere, a bastard.

37. Some names of relationships also indicate the gender by separate words:
Father, abera; voc. baba; Mother, maramu; voc. mau.
Elder brother, naramudubu; Elder sister, mabia, mabira.
Younger brother, niragerema; Younger sister, niriaorobo.

A few names of relations are common gender, and must be defined when necessary by a word denoting sex:
Emapura, parent in law; sawara, brother or sister in law; daramu, child in law; mere, child; aeramu, grand parent.

The word koko or bari used as an adjective indicates an unmarried person: bari osio, koko osio, an unmarried youth; bari besere, koko besere, an unmarried girl.
38. The gender of animals may be indicated by dubu or orobo preceding:

Dubu kakaba, a rooster; orobo kakaba, a hen.
Dubu boromo, a boar; orobo boromo, a sow.

Number.

39. A simple noun has no number:

Irisina, a fish or fishes; iopu, a fruit or fruits.

40. A few nouns have a separate plural form:

A few other words show a plural formed by mi, always with go suffixed:

Ahera, father, pl. aberamigo.
Baba, father, pl. babaigo.
Maramu, mother, pl. maramigo.
Nirara dubu, younger brother, pl. niraramigo.
Mabia, elder sister, pl. mabiamigo.
Uramu, husband, pl. uramigo.
Aeramu, ancestor, pl. aeramigo.

41. Number may be indicated by suffixes. These may be used with or without the numerals.

The singular is shown by ro:

Gi eraro, that fire; ni besere ro, this girl.

The dual is shown by toribo:

Ni besere toribo, these two girls.
Neto kirobo didiri toribo, they (were) two fisher men.
Ni netawa besere toribo, these two girls.
Netewa dubu toribogo, two men.

The trial is shown by potoro:

Gi gugi potoro, those three stars.
Nita kunu potoro owosaibi wose ito, lend me three loaves.

Arua (or aruwa), few, some; or sirioro, sirio, many, may be used as adjectives for more than three:

Aruwa sime, some bananas.
Sirio gugi, many stars, or gugi sirioro.

Other indefinite numbers are imeime, all, everyone; gabugabu, every:

Didiri imeime, all men.
Duriomoro gabugabu, every land.

42. The word patu means a bundle, company, class:

Ni paturo, this company.
Patu isosiriti, bind them in bundles.
Misinare patu, the company of missionaries.
43. The number of a noun may be shown by the verb in agreement:

Gi dUBU eauri, look at that man (eauri, see one).

Wowogo iaauri, behold the birds (iaauri, see many).

Neito damari aigimuraiama, they shut their two eyes (emurai, shut one; imuraiama, shut two).

Roro tu otuturo, stretch out one arm (otuturo, stretch one).

Ro tu aigituturutigo, thou shalt stretch thy arms (ituturuti, stretch many).

Nau dubu Iasa rudo SaguanE ito gogu, one man from Iasa to Saguane went (ogu, one goes).

Wowogu gogurumo, birds came (mo, plural particle).

Mo mere mutu moteewa tau norowotodoi durumo, I and my children are in the motee (mo, plural in durumo).

Gi gugi patu widumo-iregetutiri, the stars shall fall (mo, pl.).

SiO sepatE aime giaberegerumo, the dogs (their) ears then spread out (pl. dogs shown by rumo; pl. ears shown by i).

Nov oroBo toribo aime gobo’orudo baru wato, his wives two then sewed (him) in the baru (dual do).

SaIro igiri niarumutidurudo (let us two) put our toes into one place (dual do).

AIME gogubirumo, aime girasaubirumo motoito (three persons) then went away, and came from the bush into the house. The trial number is shown by the particle bi used with mo after the tense sign ru.

44. Number may also be shown by the pronoun in opposition:

Nogere nou duduerito aime goribowa, an old man (he) then got up.

Padi nei garogorumO, cuscus (they) said.

Case.

45. The cases of nouns are indicated by position, and by the use of suffixes and postpositions.

46. Nominative:

The nominative usually precedes the verb:

MERE radau, the child runs away.

Sa’i ina garasugumai, when the sun is set.

Nimoto niraradubu aigorisiai, our brother died.

Gi orobo nou pai ogu, that woman (she) did not come.

Wia ra Barani neito Iasa oromowato romidurudo, Wia and Barani (they two) at Iasa on the coast lived.

Proper nouns, common nouns and pronouns often appear in apposition:

Epia nogere, nou duduerito aime goribowa, Epia, an old man, he in the morning got up.

Na’u orobo aigomidiro Geretawa duriomoro wato, one woman lived at Gereta in the country.

47. Accusative:

This also precedes the verb but follows the nominative:

Gi osio nau wowogo gopia, that boy one bird killed.
Gi merero nou sio gopia, that child (he) a dog killed.
Neigo didiri epuru gowearumo, they a man’s head found.
Warioro Gunobi aiematigiai, Warioro persuaded Gunobi.
Neigo girumaimamarumo, nou abera gedaro maramu, they called them two his father and mother.
Mo nita kunu potoro owosaibi wose ito, just give me three loaves for a loan.

48. Genitive:
The genitive or possessive noun precedes the governing noun, without any special particles:
Mere abere, child’s father.
Gama overa, drum sound.
Iasa abiabi, Iasa fairies.
Dubu moto, man’s house.
Pe niro, canoe’s inside.
Samari damera, Samari hill.

Sometimes a pronoun is introduced between the nouns:
Ni oroboro nou uramu, this woman’s husband.
Simona ra Anederea netto moto, Simon’s and Andrew’s house.

49. Dative:
The dative of motion to a place or thing is shown by the suffix -ito, which is contracted to -to after i or u:
Sido geewaito aime gogu, Sido then went to a geewa fish.
Oumu tumuto radau, Oumu into the bush runs.
Nou gogu Daruto, he went to Daru.

For persons the dative of motion is shown by suffixing -ito to the noun gomo, side:
Nou ga’i Meuri gomoito, he went to Meuri (i.e., Meuri’s side).

The dative of purpose is shown by the word or postposition gido.
The same form is used after a verbal noun as an infinitive of purpose:
Nouro sopu bo’o aime gomidaig orobora gido, he an earth ball then took for a wife.
Mo ubi gama gido, I wish for a drum.
Basimuro kabi gagiwai Sido gido, Basimuro the hatchet gave to Sido.
Mai na’i nei kiwai gido, I go them to find.
Nei ubi gi pe niro dogodogo kowai gido, they wish that canoe’s inside red to make.
Gi orobo nou ubi oboito kiraro gido, that woman (she) wished into the water to jump.

50. Ablative:
The ablative of motion from a place or thing is shown by the suffix -rudo:
Nou tumu rudo rasau, he comes out of the bush.
Nou moto rudo gogu, he went from the house.
Iasa muba rudo, from Iasa point.
Kiwwai Grammar.

Maubo rudo, from Maubo (a place).
Ogu obo rudo, come away from water.

Motion from a person is shown by the addition of rudo to the noun gomo, side:
Maruu gomorudo, from Maruu (a person).

51. Origin or cause is shown by the postposition gaute, from, out of, through:
Nou sio gaute torego roiti, he from the dog afraid becomes (he fears the dog).
Obo gaute oribowa, out of the water get up (when actually in).
Nou netewa mere toribo girotoma Banuu gaute, she bore two children from Banuu.

52. Locative:
In or at a place is shown by the suffix -wa, often written -a:
Sio goroloobutirumo tumuwa, dogs bite one another in the bush.
Nou Iasa gomidiro, he lived in Iasa.
Rorotawa bobowa, it casts off its skin in the water.
Wato is also used for in, at, on:
Ni dubu toribo neto simaraime gorosiodirorudo tumu damera-wato, these two men made themselves on a hill in the bush (bush hill on).
Nouro aime gitai era wato, he then cooked on the fire.

Gomowa or gomoa is used for “beside a person.”
Moro gomowa dimeserai pewa, leave them beside me in the canoe.
Maramu naturaime gomi Mawida gomoa, her mother alone stayed beside Mawida.
Sagaru nou pai omi Meuri gomoa, Sagaru did not stay beside Meuri.

53. Comitative:
With a person, is shown by the suffix mutu:
Meuri aime godori mere mutu Sido gomoito, Meuri then went down with (his) children to Sido.
Nou orobora mutu ina gamedeti tumuto, he with his wife goes into the bush.
Nou orobo Sagaru mutu, with his wife Sagaru.

Accompaniment by a thing is expressed by ramu:
Gi orobo nou epuru ramu, with that woman’s head.
Maramu aime gidiai moto ito pida ramu, the mother then went up to the house with a torch.
Nouro aime wotomairi nou tigiriwa samo ramu, he then will put (it) on his shoulder with joy.

Ramatu is sometimes found:
Atomo ramatu, with branches.
54. Instrumental.

The suffix -ito usually expresses the instrument:

Kubira didiri nei Pedarimo uwere ito giasioutirumo, the Kubira people (they) Pedarimo with bamboo knives beheaded.

Nei sime durupi ito giasioutirumo, they with a banana plant cut them off.

Dogo aruwa didiri nei busere ginderedumomo piroito, afterwards some men (they) took girls by theft.

Gi sioro wasina airosome wototorope ito, that dog licks the meat with his tongue.

55. Through, or on account of, may be shown by the suffix -ri:

Nou umoro neigo Iesu dowari rowogurumo nou gomoito, he knew they brought Jesus to him on account of anger (dowa).

Nou duriomoro gabugabu nirimagereri, on account of his love for the world (his place every love for).

ADJECTIVES.

56. The Adjective always precedes the noun:

_Wade sime, a good banana._

Derivation:

57. Some adjectives are primitive words: _wade, good; uba, bad; erapo, strong._

Nouns may be used as adjectives preceding another noun: _kuraere sopu, stony ground; wapo aibi, stern oar, helm; gimini soro, ridge bone, spine._

In some cases the noun is reduplicated: _tamatama, thin, skinny, from tama, skin; tematema, dim, misty, from tema, smoke; ipuwoipwoo, dirty, from ipuwo, dirt._

The simple form of a reduplicated adjective does not always appear: _ororooro, dry; burugaburuga, disorderly, not straight._

Names of colours are usually formed from names of objects: _keakea, white, from kea, a white cockatoo; wibuwibu, black, from wibu, charcoal; dogodogo, red, from dogo, flame; poroporo, green._

58. Verbal Adjectives. These are equivalent to the English adjectives in -ing. They are formed by prefixing k- to the verbal word-base either in its simple or enlarged form. Thus the vowel of the first syllable varies, as well as the final syllable, but these changes do not affect the word qualified. Some examples are:

Keauri moto, a watch house (eauri, to look); keauri dubu, a man looking after one thing, a watcher; pari keauri dubu, a gardener, a man looking after one garden (pari). The plural is: pari keauri didiri, men looking after one garden.

If more than one garden, the phrase is pari keauri didiri, men watching gardens. So also from otomai, to cover one; itomai, to cover many: nou epuruwa kotomai nuuna, his head putting on thing; sairo pata kitomai nuuna, feet putting on things. In these examples the plural of the objects is shown by the prefix changing to ki. Cf. Verbs paragraph 95.

Other examples of variation in the verbal adjective are seen in:

Kadabuai dubu, married man; tax kidabuti dubu, tax collector, from adabuai, put one thing to another, to marry; idabuti, to put many things to one another in succession, to collect.

The radical suffixes and prefixes to verbal bases (pars. 104-114) may appear in these adjectives:

Keresei overa, excuse (blaming one's self word), from ese and the prefix er.
Kemesiodiro dubu, a maker for another, from osiodiro and the prefix em.
Kaboduti dubu, a singer, from abodo and suffix ti.
Kitamudiro mere, scholar, from atamu and suffix diro.
Kirimuso nuunumabu, a stumbling block, a thing to stumble over, from oisodoi.

59. There appear to be a few adjectives of obscure derivation beginning with m-:
Madi, good (Cf. wade).
Maradogo, quenchable (Cf. adogo, to extinguish; aradogo, to go out).
Maramage, lustful (Cf. amegeai, aramegeai, to commit adultery).
Modobo, equal (Cf. odobo, to measure).
Momuruwo, shaking, of an earthquake, appears to be an abbreviation of enomuruwo.

60. Negative Adjectives:
The suffix -tato forms a negative adjective. It may be added to nouns, adjectives, and verbal forms:
Durupi-tato, thin (of body), without body.
Ipuwo-tato, dirt-less, clean.
Erapo-tato, not strong, weak.
Kirowai-tato rubi, unbelieving people.
Karadogo-tato era, unquenchable fire (from aradogo, to go out of its own accord).

Reduplication does not take place in negation:
Kavikavi, crooked, but kavitato, straight.

A few negative adjectives are made by prefixing pai:
Pai dopi, insatiable, not satisfied.
Pai kikikiki, insecure, not fast.
Pai topo, insipid, without taste.
Go gudu pai kiriso irisinaro, that gudu is an inedible fish.

61. Interrogative Adjective.
Ra may be suffixed to an adjective: Wadera? Is it good? Taura? Is it finished?
62. Assertive Adjective:
An assertive adjective equivalent to a sentence is made by suffixing -na, the abbreviation of nuuna or nuunumabu, thing:
Wadena, it is a good thing.
Ubana, it is a bad thing.
Buruna, a vain (empty) thing.
Kimegediona, a screw wrench (thing for twisting something).

63. An adjective is made into a verb by adding wai, an abbreviation of owai, to make, or do, the intensive suffix go being added at the same time, thus kopu, short; kopugowai, to shorten.

The intensives go, igo, ia, etc. (paragraphs 11, 12, 16) may be added to adjectives:
Wadeigo! That is good! That will do!
Nou soboia dubu, he is a very short man.
Nou temeteme auwoiago goiti, he became worse (much more sick).

A few adjectives appear in an adverbial form with suffix ime:
Timaima, diverse; tima ipiwa, in the wrong place.

64. Demonstrative Adjectives. Cf. paragraphs 20-22.

65. Comparison of Adjectives:
Comparisons can only be made by direct statements. But the adjectives auwo, great; sobo, small, and the intensives ia and go are of very frequent use. The following are some examples:
He is stronger than I, mo pai erapo, mou auwoia erapo [I (am) not strong, be (is) great very strong].
That hole will become bigger, gi sia auwogo woitiri (that hole very big will become).
He shall do a greater work than these, ni keregediro soboia, nouro auwoia widaisiodirogo [this work (is) very small, he very great shall do].
Her sickness became worse, nou temeteme auwoiago goiti (her sickness very very great became).
Are you bigger than they? Bedanaro auwoia, nigo eboro nei? [Which (is) very big, you or they?].
Are you bigger than he? Ro igara auwoia, nou soboia? (Are you very big, he very small?) Igara is the interrogative.

Sosoro (front) is sometimes added to an adjective to increase the signification: auwo sosoro, bigger; uba sosoro, worse.

Buro is sometimes added with the reverse meaning: mere buro, little child; osio buro, little boy; soboduro, very little.

66. A few adjectives are reduplicated to show decrease of signification:
Dowa, angry; dowadowa, cross.

PRONOUNS.
Personal Pronouns.

67. The Personal Pronouns in Kiwai indicate Person and Number—Gender is not shown.
The inclusive person names the speaker or those acting with him, and corresponds to the English I or we. The exclusive person corresponds to the English thou, you, he, she, it, or they. The Singular, Plural, Dual or Trial Number is shown:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

To these the emphatic particles ro and go are often added, thus:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Inclusive</th>

<tr>
<td>Moro, mororo, morogo.</td>

</tbody>

The particle emphasizes the most prominent pronoun in the phrase, and so often indicates the subject:

- Nouro neito ou era aimei girovidiro, he listened to their words [he their (2) word then heard].
- Morogo wasoro, follow me.
- Nigogo ubapo mere airimidumo-oweari, you shall find the baby.
- Moro ra? Is it I?

Besides ro and go the other intensive suffixes may be used. Some examples are:

- Moroia pai umorogo nou, I (really) knew him not.
- Mo noue, I am he.
- Mo erea nouia, I am he (really).
- Noume, he only.
- No ereago nouiago, this is really he.
- Neime, they only.
- Nouiia, it is he.
- Pai moroime gido kirowaigot, not believing on me only.
- Mo pai nigogo eremaromai, nigo moroiaro nirimaromai, You do not choose me, I choose you.

When mo or ro immediately precede the assertive particle ai, they become mai and rai. Cf. paragraph 118:

- Mai noquro, I have come.
- Mai narogo or mo ainarogo, I say.
- Oro kirowaigo rairowitorai or oro kirowaigo ro airowitorai, thy faith has saved thee.
- Roro abera gedaro mo rai narudo-osorago, thy father and I have sought thee.

Possession:

68. This is shown by using the personal pronoun as an adjective:

- Mo ouera, my word; nimoto mere, our child.
- Ro paina, thy name; nigo epuru, your heads.
- Noui tagu, his time; nei damari, their eyes.
- Nimo pari, our garden; neito basabasa, nets of them two.
In the first and second persons singular moro and roro (or oro) are frequently used:

Moro abera, my father; roro overa, thy word; oro abera, thy father.

When the possessor is clearly indicated, a pronoun is not repeated:

Neigo nou tuito aime goromidirumo, they him with (their) hands struck.

69. The equivalents of the English "mine," "thine," etc., without a noun, are shown by adding -na to the possessive adjective: morona, mine; orona or rorona, thine; nigona, yours. But nuuna or nuunai for which na may be considered an abbreviation is in common use as an equivalent of nuunumabu, thing:

Moro nuuna imeime oro nuunai, my things all (are) thy things.

Nei erea rorona, they are thine.

Aromoipi basileia nei nuuna, Heaven's kingdom is theirs.

70. "Self" is expressed by the word simara, own, one's own, or with affix simaraime:

Nou simara motoito aime gogu, he his own house to, then went.
Nou simaraime goropiti, he hid himself.
Roro simara dwiomoro rubi, your own country people.
Ro simaraime a riayuguti ni nuunumaburo, did you say this thing of your own accord.

Simarago nidumo-omidairi, (we) will take it for (our) own.

Natura is also used in an exclusive sense for a thing by itself alone:

Nouro pasa naturaime giwia, he found leaves only.
Nou goboi gomi naturaime, he there stayed alone.
Nou naturaime ina garao, when he walked alone.

71. The Personal Pronouns are declined by postpositions and suffixes in the same way as nouns.

Dative: The dative of purpose is shown by gido, for:

Idobi dau girotutirumo morogido, do not weep for me (tears don't shed for me).
Nau orogido, one for thee.
Gonouwato aigidorosiodiro-durudo nimogido, there do you two make ready for us.

The same is used for motion or direction:

Owapotai nimogido, tell us.
Irovidiro nougido, hear him.
Mai narogo nigogido, I say to you.
Gagiwai neigido, gave to them.

In the dative "to a person," gomo, side, is introduced with the suffix ito:

Ogu moro gomoito, come to me, come to my side.
Nei gonzurudo pai kadagauriago nimo gomoito, they from there will not step over to us.
Ablative: The suffix gaute means "from the person of," and gomo is also used with rudo:

- Nou aime gaoropirogo neigaute, he then hid himself from them.
- Arataeai moro gomorudo, depart from me.
- Nou aime gadau nei gomorudo dubudubume, he ran away from them naked.

"With" is shown by the suffix mutu:

- Mai noorisiairi roromutu, I will die with you.
- Neigo idi pai imidai neimnutu, they do not take oil with them.
- Nei noumutu aime gadororumu, they then went in with him.

Gomo may also be used with the locative suffix wa or a: gomowa, gomoa, at the side of, with, among:

- Beda dubu nigo gomoa? What man among you?
- Nou tu rotomatidiro dodowa moro gomowa, his hand lies on the table with me.

Other examples of the postpositions used with pronouns appear as follows:—

- Nimo-wato araburai, fall on us.
- Nouri kigiro woweari, through him find life.

72. The local nouns are used as with nouns. See paragraph 196:

- Nigo siawato, in your midst.
- Mo nigo siawa ainarao, I walk among you.
- Nou nei siawa gomioi, he sat in their midst.
- Nou osurudo, on him.
- Nou niro magumoa, in him.
- Boso didiri moro sopu rudo, warriors under me.
- Nigo muba gopewa, in front of you.

Relative Pronouns.

73. There are no relative pronouns, but the demonstratives ina and gina, usually with the suffix ro, show what has been previously spoken of:

- Inaroro goiti wadego, the one who became well.
- Nouro aisorobairi ginaroro nemeriairo, he will receive the one who sent me.
- No beturo ginarudo niroviti? Who is this that I hear? [literally this (is) who from that I hear]; osiodiro ro inagido roguro, do what you have come for.

INTERROGATIVE WORDS AND PARTICLES.

74. The Personal interrogatives are: Betu? Who? (singular); Bedigo? Who? (plural); Dual Betugoto? To these may be added the particles: ro, go, ia (paragraph 10):

- Ro beturo? Who are you?
- Nou beturo? Who is he?
- Nigo bedigoro? Who are you?
- Go bedigoro? Who are those (people)?
Kiwai Grammar.

Betu? Bedigo? and Bedigoto? are used in asking personal names:
Oro paina beturo? What is your name? (to one).
Nigo paina bedigoro? What are your names?
Nigoto paina betugotoro? What are the names of you two?

The following examples show the personal interrogatives used in the possessive and other cases, and nouns:
Nou betu merero? He (is) whose son?
No betu muba uriona? Whose likeness? (This whose face reflection?).
Beturo widimidairi? Who shall take them?
Ro simaraiue betu ito roroumai? You make yourself out to be who? (You yourself for whom call?).
Nigo mo betuto (for betu ito) nororurumo? Whom do you call me? (You me for whom call?).
Nimo betu gomoito nimoguri? To whom shall we go?
Betuia gido rarogo? Of whom are you speaking? (Whom thus you tell about?).
Mo betuiaro norogiomai? Who touched me?

75. The interrogative for things is Beda? Ebeta? or Beta? This may be reduplicated, or used with the postpositions. It is translated by: What? or Which?

Beda osio? Which boy?
Beda reremaro? What is the matter?
Nov ebeta gowagati orogido? What did he do to you?
No beta nuumumabu? What is this thing?
Nimogo ebeta nuumumabu nidumo-swiai? What shall we find?
Ro ubi ebetagido rerea morogido? What do you want with me? (You wishful for what are with me?).
Nimo ebeta nimirisori? What shall we eat?
Ebeta oborotama nimiraoutiri? What garments shall we put on?
Bedaro? How’s that? (on the cricket field).

76. The interrogatives of place are: Boro? Where? Buta? Where to? Budo? Where from?
Sido boro? Where is Sido?
Ro abera boro? Where is your father?
Bororo nou? Where is he?
Mo giri boro? Where is my knife?
Buta rogu? Where are you going?
Ro buta rimoguri? Where will you go?
Ro budo rogu? Where do you come from?
Nou muro budo gowai? His wisdom came from where? (His wisdom where was made?).

The noun ipi, place, is used also with Beda? Ebeta? to ask the place where:

Beda ipiwa? In what place?
Nigogo nou beda ipiwa gendarumo? Where did you put him?
Nou beda ipito widoguri? Where will he go? (He what place to will go?).
Other names of places may be similarly used, or the place name may be entirely omitted:

Mo beda gabowa nogu? Where do I go (now)? (I what way on go?).
Nigoibi irisinimabu ebetawa raibidumo-itutigo? Where do you three usually cook food? (You three food at what place usually cook?).

77. The interrogative of time is Betawa? When? which is an abbreviation of Beda taguwa? At what time? This may be past or future:

Ro betawa woguri? When will you go?
Nou betawa worovameairi? When will he come back?
Ro nimogo ebetawa neaurirumo obo durugere? When did we see you thirsty? (You we when saw water hungry?).

78. The interrogative of manner is Bedabeda? How?
Gabo bedabeda nimoitiri umorogo? How shall we know the road? (Road how we shall become knowing?).
Ro bedabeda gowea gi kea durupi? How did you get (find) that white body?

79. The interrogative of cause is Ebetaido? Why? which is an abbreviation of Ebeta gido? What for?
Ororo mina ebetaido riomoria ooritiro? Why did you distribute the food again? (You again why distribute cooked food?).
Nigogo nou ebetaido riwovidiro durumo? Why do you listen to him? (You him why hear?).
Ro idobi ebetaido rorito? Why are you weeping? (You tears why shed?).

Betaramu? and Ebeta ramutu? are used for Why not?
Nigogo betaramu nou (or nougido) kirowai? Why do you not believe him? (You why not him believe?).
Nigo nou ebetaramuntu kowogu? Why do you not bring him?

In these kirowai, kowogu are verbal nouns. The construction with ramu, ramutu is not clear and requires -tato with the verbal. Nimoto ebeta ramutu kemosiai-tato? Why could we not cast it out? Mark 9.28.

Ebeta mabuwato? For what cause? is also used for Why?

80. The interrogative of number is Bedamoto? How many? How much?

Bedamoto didiri? How many people?
Bedamoto oi? How many coconuts?
Ro bedamoto nuunumabu gimade wose ito? How much do you owe? (You how much have taken in borrowing?).

Bedamoto taguto? is used for How many times? How often and Bedamoto tuturu ito? for How long?

Mororo nou uba bedamoto taguto nimi-iraerutiri? How often shall I forgive him? (I his badness how many times shall I wipe out?).
Bedamoto tuturu ito nimi-omiri nigomutu? How long shall I sit with you?

81. An interrogative may be expressed also by introducing a, ra, iga or igara into the sentence. There is little, if any, distinction of meaning:

Ororo a roruso? Are you eating one?
Ororo nuunumabu a reauri? Do you see anything?
Ororo ni auwo moto paturo a riauri? Do you see these big houses?

ra:

Taura? Is it finished?
Ra rai? Are you going?
Ro uwo ra? Are you asleep?

iga:

Ororo iga reauri? Do you see it?
Ro iga ra peito? Are you going to the canoe?
Nou iga rimioropiari? Will he kill himself?

igara:

No igara nigoto mere? Is this the son of you two?
Ro igara auwoia nou sobota? Are you greater than he?
Ro igara buaraigo? Are you a chief?

82. Pura is used as a negative interrogative. It is equivalent to pai, not, and the interrogative ra:

Mororo pura kodiogo? Shall I not drink it?
Nigogo pura ioputi? Don't you read? Have you not read?
Ro pura umoro? Don't you understand?
Ororo pura aauri? Do you not see it?

VERBS.

83. When used in actual speech the Kiwai verb consists of a Verbal Word-Base or Stem which is usually extended by suffixes and prefixes. Thus in the phrase: nouro aiwiriwoguri, meaning "he will bring many," the verbal word-base is ogu, come. From this is formed by the radical prefix iw- (the plural of ow- meaning "with something") the secondary word-base iwogu, come with many, i.e., bring many. This is further extended by the prefix ai indicating certainty, by wi- showing future time, and by r indicating a person other than the speaker and agreeing with the pronoun nouro. The final ri indicates the future. The parts of the verb are therefore ai-wi-r-iw-ogu-ri.

In the phrase: nimotogo netewa nau noripotoro nimidaibidurudo, we two are taking three sweet potatoes [i.e., nimotogo, we two; netewa nau, three (lit. two one); noripotoro, three potatoes, nimidaibidurudo, take] the verb may be divided thus: n, imidai, bi, duru, do. Here n shows agents connected with the speaker, the i in imidai (from the word-base omidai, take one at one time) shows many taken at one time, bi shows three objects, duru present time, and do two agents.
The Verbal Word-Base.

84. All Kiwai Verbal Word-Bases begin and end with a vowel or diphthong. The Word-Base is the simplest form of the Verb used in actual speech.

A few words beginning with consonants are given in the Dictionary as equivalents to English words. In these the predicative force of the word has probably obscured its proper use as a noun, adjective or adverb:

- Damudamu, swim on surface of water.
- Dubuware, walk with hands behind back.
- Garagare, loiter.
- Garoro, snore.
- Gu, grunt of anger.
- Masawere, produce a tremor of pleasant or unpleasant feeling.
- Maturupo, put hands behind back.
- Momuruwo, shake.
- Mu'u, moan, groan.
- Ninigo, whisper.
- Noro, grow.
- Nuwai, let, allow.
- Paea, clear bush.
- Peno, dive.
- Pomoro, hunt.
- Wari, laugh.
- Wiroro, call.

For words used with certain verbs to form verbal phrases Cf. pars. 174-182.

Form of the Word-Base.

85. In the simplest forms of the word-base the initial and final sounds are separated by a single consonant: abu, cross over; eru, swing; ibo, shoot; asau, come out of bush; age, be delayed; otoi, stand; ogu, come; urai, shut; aurai, pull out; orai, tie. In a'i, go, the break ' is equivalent to a consonant.

86. The nucleus of the word-base may be a monosyllable consisting of:

a. Vowel and consonant (vc)\(^1\): iapo, scoop up; ioro, climb; iori, lift; uorai, wash.

In the first three examples i may be a prefix (Cf. paragraphs 95-97 and the real word-bases apo, oro, ori. In iaoda, be entangled, the real word-base is aoda.

An example with diphthong instead of vowel is eauri, see.

After the vowel w sometimes appears for euphony: atowo, throw into fire.

1. In these formulae v stands for vowel or diphthong, c for consonant.
c. A vowel between two consonants (cvc): This is a very common form: adoro, bite; ataru, steer; arubo, fly; orito, set in line; arogo, speak; etebe, bend; osora, seek; opuse, rot; ato'o, shut.

Also with diphthong: owaupo, wrap.

d. A consonant between two vowels is rarely found: aepuai, nurse; ioumuai, breathe on.

87. The nucleus of the word-base is often disyllabic:

a. It is very common in the form (cvcv): agediai, go round; epeduai, throw; osugio, imitate; otorio, cut through.

In iasusia, win, the nucleus is susi.

b. The form (vcvc) is rarely found: oumiri, clean up.

c. Other forms are rare: eaeedai, bend bow (vvcv); otouri, tread on (cvvc).

d. Disyllabic nuclei as in a but with a closed syllable are very commonly found. In the majority of these m or r comes before the final of the word-base, but b and g are also found, and more rarely w, s and t. In these the last consonant may be euphonic. (Cf. par. 102.) Examples are:

1. Aberrum, strike; apesemo, slip; asidimo, cover; emasomo, peep; ogurumi, plunge; udurumo, push; idoromo count.

2. Aposoro, turn over; agegerai, make a hole; ototoro, split; obodoro, chase; asigiri, take out.

3. Oporigai, finish; oborogo, spread; agurubai, pull out; opirivo, untie; ekekawai, pinch; eberisi, throw; ogumute, fill up.

88. Very few primitive verbs have a polysyllabic nucleus for the word-base:

O'oritiro, to be cooked, done (Cf. o'o'ori, dry, and itai, cook); uduruapo, collide (Cf. udurumai, push; opogai, knock) are apparently compounds. But in asë'revai, roll off, no analysis can be made.

Reduplication in the Verbal Word-Base.

89. In Kiwai reduplicated words are usually adjectives, hence very few Verbal Word-Bases appear in a reduplicated form. In these the reduplication disappears when the word-base is used with a Suffix or Prefix. Amumu, skin a coconut (iamuti, skin many separately); ododo, beat drum (emodo, cause drum to be beaten); obobo, dig hole (iobuti, dig several holes); isisi, roll fibre (isia, spin with hands); umumu, fan (orumu, fan one's self); usoso, chop one stick (iouso, chop firewood); ototo, chop with wooden adze (ioto, chop several); uroro, build dam (urom'u, a dam).

For the following no simple form is found:

Ememi, wait for; ididi, build; ososo, break, crush.
Variation in the Verbal Word-Base.

90. Besides the changes in the Initial and Final sounds of the word-base, the nucleus may vary also. The variation only affects the vowels and corresponds to a slight change in the meaning.

The following are examples of variation in the nucleus of the word-base:

- Aberege, spread, open out; oborogo, spread with the hands; oburawa, spread fire or embers. The nuclei are: bereg, borog, burug. The last is seen in the derivative oburuguti, to repeatedly spread the same fire.
- Adabuwai, place one thing beside another; odobo, measure with a stick or rule. Nuclei: dab, do.
- Odoat, take a fruit from a tree; udewa, strip a leaf from the midrib of a cocopalm leaf. Nuclei: do, de.
- Ododo, beat drum; odu, in derivative iwodu, throb. Nuclei: dod (reduplicated) and d. In the word oduduruti, quiver, the nucleus appears reduplicated in dud.

Changes take place in the Verbal Word-Base when the radical suffixes and prefixes are added. For these Cf. pars. 106, 112.

Relation of Verbal Word-Base and Noun.

91. Some examples in which the Word-Bases of Verbs and Nouns are related have been given in paragraph 31. In every case the Verbal Word-Base must begin with a vowel or diphthong. Any Verbal Word-Base may become a noun by prefixing k-.

The Verbal Root.

92. As the initial and final of the word-base may be changed to indicate some modification of the action or condition shown by the nucleus, the nucleus may be regarded as the root.

In the words agediai, go round something once; egediai, spin once; egedio, to keep twisting a thing round; owagediai, to go round with something, take it round; egediouti, to keep spinning; eregediai, spin once of its own accord; emowagediai, to encompass; eremowagediai, go round something once of its own accord, there is a common nucleus gedi which means “going round,” and this may be regarded as the root.

The nucleus or root is never found in use separately. The word-base may be so used, and always appears with an initial and final vowel or diphthong.

Meaning of the Word-Base.

93. The meaning of the word-base is modified by changing the initial or final sound. It is further modified by the radical prefixes or suffixes.

The Initial of the Word-Base.

94. The initial vowels a, e, o, u and the diphthongs ai, au, oi indicate action on one person or thing. Hence words with these initials usually correspond to transitive verbs of other languages with one object, and to neuter verbs, e.g.:
Transitive: Agiivai, give one; etebe, bend one; odoai, pick one fruit from a tree; odoo, pick fruit from one tree; urai, shut one (door); audai, pull out one (hair); oirai, tie up one (canoe); aiouti, break up (a house).

Neuter: Amaro, dance; adau, run away; esegere, limp; ogu, come; otoi, stand; utua, lie down; airio, come ashore.

95. Action on more than one person or thing is shown by the initial i. The i may be substituted for, or prefixed to the original initial. Initials in a prefix i, as e.g., agiivai, give one; iagiivai, give many. Exceptions are:—

Adabuwai, put one thing beside another; idabuti, put many together.
Adagauria, step over; idagauria, step over many.
Ata'uti, press sago in the hands, pl. ita'uti.

Initials in e change to i, as e.g., egeba, cut down one (tree); igeba, cut down several. An exception is edea, leave one; iedea, leave many.

Initials in o change to i, as e.g., odoai, take one fruit from a tree; idoai, take several fruits at one time (i.e., in a bunch).

There are a good many exceptions:
Odiai, string a bow; iodai, string several.
Odoria, rip one; iodoria, rip several.
Omoria, share with one; isomoria, distribute.
Opodia, break one; iopodia, break many.
Opogai, knock at one door; iopoguti, knock at several.
Opoi, count, enumerate; ioputi, count many.
Omidai, take one; imade, take many.

Initials in u prefix i, as e.g., urai, shut (a door); iurai, shut several. Exceptions are:—
Uduruaupo, collide with one: iduruaupo, collide with many.
Umumu, fan one; umumu, fan many.

Initial diphthongs. Ai and au prefix i for a plural object, but oi changes to i. Examples are:—
Aiouti, smash one; iaiouti, smash many.
Auro, dig one piece of ground; iauro, dig several pieces.
Audo, pull out one hair; iaudo, pull out several.
Oirai, tie or tow one thing; irai, tie or tow many.

In a few words there is a change in the nucleus of the word-base when the initial is i, as e.g.:—
Oruso, eat one; iriso, eat several.
Omidai, take one; imade, take many.
96. Although the initial i may usually be regarded as equivalent to the English plural object, there are cases in which the plural idea is not clear. Some examples are:

- Itoboa, to take one step (otoboa, get up from sitting).
- Iapo, to scoop up water, fill a mug once.
- Idimai, take one thing off fire.
- Igiri, put one thing into another, as, e.g., thread into a needle.
- Iiria, put one thing into a bag.
- Iori, turn over sago in the kneading trough.
- Ioro, climb (a tree).
- Isia, spin a top with the hands.
- Idoromo, count.

In all these examples a change of place is implied in the action, and more than one object is concerned in its performance.

97. Neuter verbs having no object, do not make use of the initial i. But there are several verbs which are regarded as intransitive in English but appear in Kiwai with the initial i when they denote action by more than one. Such are: abu, pass over (as, e.g., a river); iabu, many pass over; agome, drown; iagome, many drown; odori, go down; iodori, many go down; ogogoro, swoop down; igogoro, many swoop; aguro, one person keeps nodding; iaguro, many nod; osumiriti, one withers; isumiriti, several wither. In these there may be as in the verbs noted in paragraph 96 some reference to a change of position.

The i of paragraphs 95-97 is retained in the dual and trial of the verb, but two or three objects are otherwise indicated. Cf. paragraphs 130-133.

The Final of the Word-Base.

98. Two groups of Verbal Word-Bases are distinguished by their final sounds. The first group comprises bases ending in e, i, o, u, the second those ending in a and ai:

a. Word-Bases ending e, i, o, u mostly imply continuity of action and correspond to verbs which in English denote a continuous or sustained movement such as come (ogu), sing (abodo), dance (amaro), speak (arogo), fly (arubo), beat (aberumo), etc.

b. Word-Bases ending in a or ai imply momentary action, or an action performed by one movement, such as those expressed by the English cut (otoai), kill (opia), break (opodia), shut (urai), prick (aurai). This group also includes inceptive verbs such as: arubia, begin to fly; aberai, begin to boil.

99. Some of the Verbal Word-Bases belong to one group only. When the word-bases occur in both groups the difference in the finals correspond to a difference of meaning.

Word-Bases with finals e, i, o, u may be termed Continuative, those in a and ai Restricted. The first denote actions generally, the second those performed only at one time and in one place.
The following examples will show the force of the finals in conjunction with the initials:—

To pick one fruit from a tree is odoai. There is one fruit picked at one time in one place (i.e., from one tree). If more than one are picked at the same time (e.g., in a bunch) idoai is used. To keep picking from the same tree is odo, i.e., to pick from one tree one fruit at a time. To keep on picking from several trees is idoo. The picking of a fruit separately from each of several trees is shown by a suffix ti, in idouti. The word-base throughout is do.

Another example is age, to be delayed, i.e., to continually meet some obstacle; iage, to be delayed by continually meeting obstacles; ageai, to be delayed by some person or thing once; iageai to be delayed by meeting several obstacles at one time.

100. Most of the words in the following lists are found in use without radical prefixes or suffixes. The form used when there is more than one object (paragraph 95, or as in paragraph 97) is marked pl. Words in parentheses are found only in compounds:

First Group.

a. Word-Bases in e only:
   - Adame, stupefy.
   - Agome, drown, pl. iagome.
   - Atume, reproach.
   - Awege, chip with knife.
   - Esegere, limp.
   - Obore, have sexual intercourse.
   - Ogumute, fill up.
   - Opuse, rot.

b. Word-Bases in i only:
   - A’i, go by canoe.
   - Eauri, see, pl. iauri.
   - Ididi, build.
   - Iori, lift, turn over.
   - Isisi, roll fibre.
   - Odori, go down, pl. iodori.
   - Ogurumi, plunge, dip.
   - Omi, sit.
   - Omiri, admire.
   - O’o’ori, dry, pl. i’o’ori.
   - Oumiri, clean up a road.

   Also in oi:
   - Omiot, sit.
   - Otoi, stand.

c. Word-Bases in o only:
   - Aberumo, strike, pl. iaberumo.
   - Abodo, sing, pl. iabodo.
   - Adoro, walk on something high.
Kiwai Grammar.

Agurumo, sink, pl. iagurumo.
Airio, come ashore.
Amaro, dance.
Aparo, breathe.
Aro, shoot, pl. iaro.
Asegemo, limp.
Asio, cross over.
Aworo, cut firewood, pl. iaworo.
Auworo, wade.
Egedio, fill pipe.
Igiro, live.
Iposoro, tread down grass; oposoromai, fasten down by a weight.
Isiro, throw away, reject.
Obo, shoot, pl. ibo.
Obobo, sew thatch.
Obodoro, chase, pl. ibodoro.
Ododo, beat drum.
Oduduro, press, squeeze.
Ogodio, hate.
Ogogoro, swoop, pl. igogoro.
O'oritiro, be cooked.
Opito, be ready (of food).
Osio, walk on heels.
Osugio, imitate, pl. isugio.
Osuruwo, go out.
(Oto), ototo, chop, pl. ioto.
Ototoburio, stop, halt.
Urio, blow, pl. iurio.
Uroro, build dam.
Usoso, chop, pl. ionuso.

d. Word-Bases in u only:

Abu, cross over; iabu, many cross.
Ogu, come.
Orou, lie level.
Otomu, direct, command.
O'ubu, lay fire.
Uwumu, fan, pl. imumu.

Also in au:

Adau, run away.
Asau, come out of the bush.

e. Word-Bases in a:

In a few cases where a follows a consonant the verb belongs to the first group.

Auwota, look up.
Egeba, cut down, pl. igeba.
O'osa, darn.
Osora, seek, pl. isora.
Otura, crow.
Uwa'a, bathe.
Second Group.

101. a. Word-Bases ending in a only:
   Adagauria, step over, pl. idagauria.
   Adugia, stop or kill with missile, pl. iadugia.
   Aibowa, go.
   Apoqia, put head out of water.
   Edea, leave, pl. iedeia.
   Egeaia, be destitute.
   Erea, be, become, pl. iria.
   Iaoda, be entangled in bush.
   Iasusia, win.
   Idumia, wink.
   Igara, hope.
   Iria, sound.
   Isirawa, come out of water.
   Odoria, rip, tear, pl. iodoria.
   Opodia, break, pl. iopodia.
   Oroiawa, shed skin.
   Otoria, cut through.
   Ovia, launch.

b. Word-Bases ending in ai only:
   Aepuai, nurse, pl. iaepuai.
   Agerai, open a passage.
   Ameai, loosen bark.
   Asomai, peep.
   Asugumai, put in hole, go down, sink.
   Atimai, close, shut.
   Atowerai, quench, fill up.
   Aurai, prick.
   Eaeedai, bend bow, pl. iaeedai.
   Ididi, come up from below.
   Ie'derai, separate fingers.
   Ioumuai, breathe on many.
   Itoai, cut.
   Oborigiai, be wetted.
   Odiai, draw bowstring, string a bow, pl. iodiai.
   Ododiai, smarten.
   O'o'o'rai, bend, pl. i'o'o'rai.
   Osiai, embrace, pl. isiai.
   Osome'ai, kiss, pl. isomeai.
   Osurai, stand on tiptoe.
   Osu'umai, finish, pl. isu'umai.
   Owai, make, pl. iwayne.

102. Verbs of allied meaning may show continuous movement or restrict the action to one performance as, e.g., in English “shake the head” compared with “nod,” or “bite a bit off” compared with “nibble.” This difference is shown in Kiwai by changing the final of the word-base.

Bases with the Continuative form in e, i, or u may change to ai, but usually ai (or a rarely) is added. Bases in o more often change to ai after a consonant and to a after a vowel. Sometimes r, m or t is inserted for euphony.

The following lists show these changes in Verbs without Prefixes or Suffixes except in those cases where the simple Base does not appear in both the Continuative and Restricted forms.

Many Continuative forms are not used alone but appear with the suffix diro.

When action on several objects necessitates separate performances in several places i cannot be prefixed to the Continuative and Restricted forms of the word-base. For example: asidimo, keep on covering the same thing; asidimai, cover a thing once; iasidimai, cover several at one time; but iasidimo could not be used for covering several things continuously, as separate actions in separate places are implied, and the term used is iasidimuti, cover one at a time, or several at a time. So also, adabuwai, place one thing beside another. If several things are so placed, the word-base must be idabuti. Cf. suffix ti, paragraphs 105-106.

Word-Bases Belonging to Both Groups.

103. a. Word-Bases in e and ai:
1. E becomes ai:
   Epedue, pl. ipedue, shoot; epeduai, pl. ipeduai.
   Etetere, miss the mark; etegerai.
   Iaeede, keep pulling bowstring; iaeedai, pull once.
   Iboberediro, make holes in a nut; oboberai, make one hole.

2. Ai is added to e:
   Age, keep meeting an obstacle, pl. iage; ageai, meet an obstacle once, pl. iageai.
   Atepe, hold in place, pl. iatepe; iatepeai, hold many at one time.
   Etebe, keep bending; itebe, bend many one at a time; etebai, bend a thing once.
   Osome, keep licking; osomeai, lick once; osomeai, kiss, pl. isomeai.

3. Irregular:
   Imade, take many one at a time; omidai, take one; imidai, take several at one time.

The addition of a to e is only found in the derivative:
   Aradame, keep falling back; aradamea, fall backward.

b. Word-Bases in i and ai:
1. I becomes ai, but the continuative form is only found with the suffix diro:
   Oriridiro, keep hanging; orirai, hang one's self (reflexive).
   Orobidiro, hold continuously; orobai, catch hold of.
   Osoridiro, keep sitting on the heels; osorai, sit on heels.
Kiwai Grammar.

Iragotidiro, carry many often, lit. drag on one's self; agotai, drag once, pl. iagotai.

2. Ai is added to i:
   Amisi, shake; amisiai, pl. iamisiai.
   Atsigiri, take out, pl. iatsigiri; asigiriai, turn up wick of lamp.
   Ateri, walk or sit with back to another; ateriai, pass on the road.
   Eberisi, keep throwing the same thing; eberisiai, throw once; iebersiai, many at one time.
   Esei, hate, pl. iseit; eseiai, put away, pl. iseiai.

3. In some cases m or t is introduced before ai:
   Amidi, keep twisting round; amiditai, turn one thing round another.
   Oposoridiro, coverlay, cover with wings; oposoromai, be kept down by a covering.

   c. Word-Bases in o and ai:
      1. These are the most numerous. The continuative forms sometimes appear with the suffix diro:
         Agediodiro, keep going round something; agediai, go round once.
         Aguro, shake the head, pl. iaaguro; agurai, nod.
         Apese, only in the reflexive arapesemo, keep slipping; apesemaai, slip. The word-base is apese.
         Asidimo, keep covering one thing; asidimai, cover up, pl. iasidimai.
         Asio, cross a road, behead; asiiai, lop off, pl. iasiiai.
         Audo, pull one thing out often; audai, pull out a hair or blade of grass.
         Ebosio, root up; ebosiai, root up once.
         Egedio, to spin, go round and round; egediai, spin, as a top.
         Iasito, keep leaning over; iasttai, to heel over, as a canoe at sea.
         Idimo, only in the reflexive oridimo, come out of water by itself, of a crab; idimai, take off fire. Word-Base idi, with euphonic m.
         Odoo, keep picking one fruit at a time from one tree; idoo, gather fruit from several trees; odoai, pick one fruit; idoaui, pick several fruits at one time.
         Oduguro, hollow out, pl. iduguro; odugurai, rinse, pl. idugurai.
         Ogirio, crawl on floor; ogiriai, only in reflexive orogiriai, shift out of the way.
         Osio, cut one many times; osiai, to let out blood.
         Otuturo, stretch out an arm, pl. ituturo; otuturai, stretch once, pl. ituturai.
         Udurumo, keep pushing, pl. iudurumo; udurumai, push once, pl. iudurumai.
2. O becomes ia. The proper ending of the Word-Base is probably i:

Amudo, pull on one rope, pl. iamudo; amudia, pull one once; iamudia, pull many at one time.
Apogo, bore nut to let out water; iapogo, make many holes; apogia, put head out of water after diving.
Aposoro, turn over and over, pl. iaposoro; aposoria, overturn one, pl. iaposoria, overturn many at once.
Arubo, to keep flying; arubia, to begin to fly.
Atowo, throw into the fire, pl. iatowo; atowia, throw one into the fire; iatowia, throw many at one time.
Otoro, to keep biting; arutoro, to begin to bite.
Arowo, in reflexive pl. iarowo; arowia, have eyes open, pl. iarowia.

3. A is added to o, and oa may be written owa:

Odobo, measure one piece with a rule, pl. idobo; odobowa, measure once.
Omororo, keep putting out of mouth; omorooa, put out a piece once.
Orito, set in line, fall in as soldiers; oritowa, threadle, as fish on a string.
Otoburio, keep sitting and rising; otobowa, get up; itoboa, take one step.

4. Ai is added with euphonic m, t or r:

Adoro, keep biting; adorotai, bite a piece off.
Agumo, put into a person's mouth; iagumo, put many things in one at a time; agumotai, put something into a person's mouth once.
Aibidiro, one person keeps paddling; iaibidiro, many paddle; aibiromai, paddle once.
Arao, walk; arao, walk aimlessly.
Ato'o, keep closing or shutting, clap hands; iato'o, close one often or several at a time; iaoto'ai, close once; iato'otai, close many at one time.
Omudo, drag canoe into water; omudodiro, keep dragging; omudorai, to draw a person.
Orogio, keep touching one thing, pl. iorgio; orogiomai, touch at one time.

5. There are some irregularities:

Aporiso, in the reflexive araporiso, keep yawning or gaping; aporisava, open a coconut by one stroke; iaporisava, open many by one stroke.
Auro, to keep digging one piece, several diggers; iauro, many dig several pieces; aurutai, dig ground.
Opiro, only in reflexive oripiro, slink and crawl in shame, hide one's self; opirava or opirawa, to hide.
Opo'o, bend double; opoidiro, keep bent.
d. Word-Bases in u and ai:

1. Word-Bases in u generally add ai, which may be written wai:
   - Atamu in atamudiro, continually teach one; itamudiro, continually teach many; atamuai, teach one at one time; itamuai, teach several at one time.
   - Eru, keep swinging one, pl. ieru; eruwai, swing one once.
   - Ogomudiro, keep in mouth; ogumuwai, hold in the mouth.

2. Other examples:
   - Atarudiro, keep steering; atarumai, steer one time.
   - Omu, in reflexive only iromu, pick one’s teeth; omua, to spear a fish.

The Radical Suffixes

104. The Radical Suffixes modify and extend the Word-Bases. They remain attached to the Base throughout all its changes in the sentence. In meaning they are analogous to the Finals of the Word-Bases.

The Radical Suffixes are ti, diro, wado, and doi.

The Suffix ti

105. Separate performances of an action are shown by adding ti to the word-base, as, e.g., ipesuti, to lose several things one at a time (ipesuai, to lose several at one time); asesuti, to cut pieces from a thing over and over again; iasesuti, cut pieces from several things (asese, cut one piece). Used with the initial i, ti indicates action on several objects separately, as, e.g., iagiwuti, to distribute, i.e., give separately to several, from iagiwai, give to several at one time. With the other initials ti indicates separate actions on the same object, as, e.g., opoguti keep knocking at one door (iopoguti, at several doors) from opogai, knock one; aditi, to keep lighting the same thing (iaditi, light several fires) from adia, to set fire to.

When the verb has no object the suffix ti still indicates the separation of the actions, as, e.g., iririsiti, many die, from irisi, one dies once; irotuti, many are born, from orotu, one is born. When one person may repeat the action ti may be used, as, e.g., ameduti, one goes into the bush, comes out and goes in again; odoruti, one keeps on entering. The final vowel or diphthong of the Verbal Word-Base is often modified when ti is added.

106. The following are the principal changes, but there are many irregularities, and euphony no doubt plays an important part:

- Bases in i or u following a consonant: suffix ti:
  - Argiti, scratch one repeatedly (arigi).
  - Iamuti, husk many nuts separately (amumu).

  Exception: otouruti, tread on one repeatedly (otouri, trample).

- Bases in e, o, ai, a, following a consonant change the final to u before suffixing ti:
  - Etebuti, fold (etebe, bend).
Kiwai Grammar.

Iapoguti, make several holes in a nut (apogo).
Uruti, shut the same door often (urai).
Igebuti, fell many trees one at a time (egeba).

There are a few exceptions:
Iagurubiti, pull out many one at a time (agurubai).
Oririti or oriruti, hang down, of fruits on a tree (orirai).
Ototututi, taste the same many times (otopat).

There are a few exceptions:
Iapoguti, make several holes in a nut (apogo).
Uruti, shut the same door often (urai).
Igebuti, fell many trees one at a time (egeba).

There are a few exceptions:
Iapoguti, make several holes in a nut (apogo).
Uruti, shut the same door often (urai).
Igebuti, fell many trees one at a time (egeba).
g. A few words add tuti:

Emaeatuti, wonder continually at the same thing (emaeo).
Oturatuti, repeatedly crow (of a fowl) (otura).
Iwiatuti, find many (owea).

There are many verbs which only appear with this suffix, and the simple word-bases have not been found in use. Most of them plainly show actions which cannot be performed by one movement. Some examples are:

- Agati, plant.
- Asiouti, walk about.
- Eteruti, spread out of colours at sunset.
- Odobuti, try, test.
- Ogiworuti, stagger.
- Orimuti, polish.
- Osiuti, cut into pieces.

The Suffix diro.

107. The suffix diro indicates the continuous performance of an action or its performance without a break: omudo, drag; omudodiro, go on dragging; orou, lie down; oroudiro, remain lying down; orobai, catch, hold; orobidiro, hold for a long time.

Diro is not suffixed to word-bases in a or ai, as these indicate a completed action, but it is often found with the other bases, and especially with those in o. In these the final indicates the continuous nature of the action, and the suffix its permanence, as, e.g., ovioro, lift up, move upward; oviorodiro, remain lifted up; ogirio, crawl; ogiriodiro, crawl for a long time; omi, sit; omidiro, stay.

A few Word-Bases in ai change ai to i, before suffixing diro: osoridiro, remain sitting on the heels, from osorai. The majority of such Bases have no simple continuative form. Cf. paragraph 103b.

In cases when an action is indicated which is necessarily of a lasting nature or takes time for its performance diro is always suffixed to the word-base, as, e.g., osiodiro, make; emaseidiro, have patience; emaragidiro, keep in mind, think, remember; orogidiro, wear a girdle; irowidiro, see. Most of the words so used are compounds.

The Suffix wado.

108. Wado indicates the repetition of an action or its frequent and regular performance: irimaooraiwado, shriek many times; oriodoraiwado, go astern frequently; iaeedaiwado, pull the bowstring many times (without shooting); idaiwado, come up from below often; arauraiwado, land from a canoe one after another. Wado is usually added to the word-base in ai, action at one time, just as diro is added to o, but in some cases wado may be added to a word-base in i. An example is owoqurumiwado, dip something often, from owoqurumi, plunge with a thing, i.e., dip a thing; orogurumidiro, dip one’s self for a long time, i.e., plunge one’s self for a time.

The separation of the actions is shown in such words as odoriwado, go down (then return) and go down again; emaratateiwado, to recall, think at different times.
The Suffix doi.

109. The meaning of this suffix is not easy to define. It usually appears to indicate backward or forward movement, and sometimes shows removal or reversal. Doi is used for a single continued action. When there are separate movements, duti is used. It is only added to word-bases with final o.

Most of the words formed with doi are compounds and the vowels of the word-bases are changed. In the following examples the simple word-base is added in parentheses:

Obiriodoi, take off one garment; ibiriodoi ama, take off two (ibirioduti, undress); orio doi, walk backward; orio duti, keep going astern (aro, walk); orowiodoi, beat against tide, avenge (ai, go); oguriodoi, bow the head (aguro, shake the head, but ogoridiro, keep the head up); orogowodoi, not go, postpone, be late; emerigidoi, to ebb of tide (ogu, go); asiriodoi, spill, upset (asioro, bale out water); odumooriodoi, jump back in terror (odumo, jump); emadebiodoi, catch as a ball (emadebiai, catch a thing thrown); oisiodoi, stumble and fall (emuso, trip); uwodoi, pour out; uwoduti, pour several; iuwodoi, iuwoduti, write; emowiodoi, absorb, draw deep breath.

In aratorodos, from aratoro, ask, and emetiodoi, send for, the force of the suffix do is not clear. Cf. Lu. 18.40.

Radical Prefixes.

110. There are three groups of Radical Prefixes modifying the meaning of the Verbal Word-Base:

1. Ar, er, or, ir.
2. Em, im.
3. Ow, iw.

The Prefixes ar, er, or, ir.

111. These are identical in meaning and show spontaneity of action, or action by the agent upon itself, or by itself, or for its own benefit.

The vowel in ar, er, or agrees with the initial of the word-base, but word-bases with initial u are irregular. The prefix ir indicates plural or distributive action as in pars. 95, 96. The prefixes may be used with any form of the word-base, and also when the suffixes ti, divo, etc., are added.

Examples:

Araderio, move by itself (aderio, move a thing).
Orodoburo, open of its own accord (odoburo, open as a door).
Araberumo, strike one’s self (aberumo, fight).
Ereauri, look at one’s self (eauri, see).
Aragotai, carry on the shoulder (i.e., drag on one’s self; agotai, drag).
Aragumotai, put into one’s own mouth (agumotai, put a thing into another’s mouth).
Kiwai Grammar.

Aradagauria, turn a somersault, step over one's self (adagauria, step over something).

Aradabuti, assemble (i.e., several come together spontaneously; adabuti, put together).

Some examples with ir showing action on several things, or distributive action are:—

Iragotai, carry several things on one's shoulders at the same time (agotai, to drag); iratarumai, step aside to avoid several things (atarumai, steer at one time); iragumotai, put several things into one's own mouth at once; irato'o, clap the hands; arato'otai, collide (ato'o, to bring together, shut as lid of a box); iramorowa, spit on themselves; aramorowa, one spits on himself; iradau, several run away (adau, run away).

Some irregular examples with u as the initial of the word-base are: oroumu, fan one's self (umumu, uumu, fan); erurai, shut itself as a door blown by the wind (urai, shut); oruriai, come out of itself (uriai, draw out). Other examples have the prefix or before u.

As these prefixes restrict the performance of the action to the doer, they often form the equivalent to a neuter verb, as, e.g., iromudo, creep along (omudo, drag a thing); eregediai, spin as a top, i.e., turn round by itself (egediai, to turn a thing round).

Hence in the case of a great many neuter verbs no forms appear except with these prefixes. Examples are: ara'aromo, bounce as a ball; ararisi, have cramp; aratoro, to inquire, ask questions; arawo'o, bark as a dog; arogo, talk; erebedere, dissolve; eregetei, fall; iria, sound, of a drum; orisai, die; orio'o, play; ororo, enter a boat, embark; oroto, be born, shed (of tears); oribowa, get up; ororuo, come down.

A further extension to actions performed for one's benefit, or the reverse, appears in the following: ara'erai, lose a thing; iraeruti, lose things at different times; arapoi, point out; araribia, drive away;aratuti, chew; erea, one is, becomes; iria, many become; eruse, lack; orobai, hold one thing; irobai, hold several; oruso, eat one; iriso, eat several.

The Prefixes em, im.

112. These prefixes indicate the performance of an action for some purpose or because of some person or thing.

Em is invariable, but sometimes causes an initial o or u of the word-base to become e. Im is used as the plural of em.

Examples: emogu, go for, fetch (ogu); emodoru, enter for a thing, go in for it when the speaker is outside, come in for it when the speaker is inside (odoru); emeauri, look at for someone, i.e., look after it (eauri); emoguriodoi, stoop and pick up something (oguriodoi); emaberumo, strike for something, as, e.g., the water to drive fish into a net, smaberumo, if many strike (aberumo); emetebe, put one hem on a garment; emetebe, keep putting hems on (etebe, bend); emotoi, stand for some reason, as, e.g., to wait at table.
In some examples, especially when used imperatively, em has nearly the force of a causative: emodo, beat the drum for something, have it beaten (ododo); emabodo, tell one person to sing for another; imabodo, get many to sing; emamaro, dance for the sake of dancing, play the fool at a dance, be impelled to dance when others are doing so; imamaro, of many doing so.

Examples of modified initial o: emeirai, tow, tie for pulling (oirai, tie); emepitawa, bore a hole for something (opito, bore); idobo emerete, bewail (idobo oroto, shed tears, weep); ememi, wait for (omi, sit).

Some verbs are only found with this prefix, as, e.g., emeirai, begin; ememidi, stamp (to shake of dust from the feet); emetiodoi, send for a person, by messenger, and others. Cf. em in the Dictionary.

The Prefixes ow and iw.

113. Ow shows the performance of the action with some one thing, iw its performance with several things.

These prefixes do not affect the initial of the word-base.

Examples: owamaro, dance with one decoration; iwamaro, dance with several; owoqu, take or bring one; iwoqu, take or bring several (ogu, go or come); owabu, take something over a river, cross with it (abu); owadau, run away with something, as, e.g., tide causing a boat to drift (adau, run away); iwadagauria, change, step over with things (adagauria); owarogo, spread a report (arogo, say, tell); iwaguro, keep nodding heads; owasio, move a thing from one place to another, cross over with it; iwasio, make partitions in a house, cross over with things (asio, to go across).

A good many words appear only with this prefix. In most cases they are transitive verbs, as, e.g., owagegere, turn (something) round; iwagiriai, stop many; owagiriai, stop one; owagoria, have or possess something; owai, make something; iwai, make many, etc. Cf. Dictionary.

Compound Prefixes.

114. Two or more radical prefixes may be used together thus:—

a. Em and im are used with ar as emar, imar and with ow as emow, imow.

b. Er and ir are used with em and im as erem, irim; and or and ir with ow and iw as orow and iriw.

c. Ow and iw are used with ar, or and ir as owar, owor, iwar.

The analysis of words in which these prefixes are used is sometimes obscure, especially where the simple word-base has not been found in use.

The following are examples of the compound radical prefixes:—

a. Emar, imar:

Emaratateai, make way for, remember (aratateai, move one's self out of the way; atapeai, move something out of the way); imaratateai, many remember; emaratateai, infect (ateai, adhere).
Emow, imow:

Emowodoro, have something brought in, or put in; imowodoruti, knock nails in with a hammer (owodor, bring in; owodoruti, put several into one; odoro, enter); emowamaro, dance with another's ornaments; imowamaro, dance with several ornaments belonging to another; emowagediai, encompass (agediai, go round something); imowosodai, divide things among many (osodai, divide).

b. Erem, irim:

Eremurai, shut one's self in by closing one door; irimurai, many shut themselves in by closing one door; irimuruti, one or more shut themselves in by closing all the doors (emurai, enclose; urai, shut); eremugudiro, join by putting one piece into another; trimasigiriti, stretch one's self after lying down.

Orow, iriw:

Orowogiriodiro, shave, keep crawling with something over one's self (ogirio, crawl); orowadumo, jump with surprise at something (odumo, jump); orowopirava, lie in wait, hide one's self with something (opirava, hide); iriwaporigai, waste; iriwaporiguti, squander, finish things one's self (oporigai, finish); iriwamudo, scramble, keep snatching things one's self (owamudo, snatch; amudo, keep pulling); iriwasisigiri, scramble, strive, stretch after things one's self (asigiri, pull out of place).

Orow, often merely indicates that the agents act in concert, and is usually plural: orowomi, many seat themselves (omi, sit); orowotobuti, many get up of themselves; orowadaudiro, many keep running away.

c. Owar, iwari:

Owaratatateai, remove one, depose as a king; iwaratateai, remove many one at a time (atateai, move something; aratateai, move one's self out of the way).

No simple base is found for oworodu, pierce, stab.

A few words are found with three prefixes combined.

Eremar, irimar:

Eremaromai, bespeak (emaro, do, turn); irimaratateai, many remember about many things.

Also perhaps aramariodorai (Jno 13.24) beckon, make signs behind another (orio, go behind a person; oriodo, go backward).

Eremow, irimow:

Eremowagediai, go round something once by himself (agediai, go round); irimowadagauria, change ends, reverse, exchange (adagauria, step over); irimowogirio, sprawl, slide and stumble (ogirio, crawl); irimowagegere, keep going about ship (owagegere, turn something round); irimowogumuti, put things in one's own mouth so as to impede speech (ogomuwai, put something in a person's mouth).

The compound prefixes have not been fully studied.

The Assertive Particle ai.

115. This particle asserts the actual performance of an action.
It takes precedence of all other verbal particles and is written prefixed to the personal or tense sign.

116. Present:

In present time ai indicates that the action is really being done, as, e.g., nou airogu, he comes, he is in the act of coming; mororo dou ainduriso, I am eating sago; nimo ainaidurumo, we go, we are going; mo ubi aiverea, my wish remains, I wish.

117. Past:

In the past ai indicates that the action has actually taken place, e.g., if it be asked Hama boro? Where is the hammer? The reply is, Ainemeserai, I have left it. So also: mororo netewa dubu toribo aintiwea, I have found two men; roro aireberisiai, you (actually) threw something (once).

118. Future:

In the future ai denotes certainty of action: nou aiwagiwairi, he will certainly give it; nou aiwoguri, he will go; nou aiweremedutiri miaena ito, he will adorn himself with ornaments; Sido nou aigemara-gidiro gibo, Sagaru aiwiwawameairi, Sido thought thus, Sagaru will surely come back; mai norisiair, I shall die.

Ai combines with the pronouns mo and ro as mai and rai, and is then written with the pronoun and not with the verb: mai nimioguri, I will come; mai narogo, I am saying.

Also with the objective pronoun: nigogo mai nidumo-osorari, you shall seek me (paragraph 67); roro abera gedaro mo rai narudo sorago, thy father and I have been seeking thee.

119. Aime:

The adverbial particle me (paragraph 14) is often combined with ai as aime. It is written separately before the verb. Ai and aime cannot both be used in the same clause.

Aime indicates actual performance, and may often be translated by "then," especially when used as a correlative of ina:

Neito aime gogurudo aime gowearudo, they two went (i.e., after being told to go) then found.
Sopuse gagari aime gomidai, aime gagiwai Sido gido, Sopusi an arrow then took, then gave it to Sido.
Sagaru pinio aigorobidiro, nou aime gomiosi gowo eresewa oiwori, Sagaru carried (had been carrying) a large bag, she then (so she) sat on the bank of the creek doing nothing.
Neigo ina girovudiro, aime garogo, when they heard, then (they) said.

Kiwai Grammar.

Aime may be combined with the pronoun mo:
Maime nowasorori (do something), then follow me.

120. Ai is used with d- and -go- in the future imperative as aid- and aigo- (paragraph 165) and with nu- in the permissive as nuai- or nuwai (paragraph 169).

Aime is also found with aime as nuaim- (paragraph 169).

121. When ai or aime is used with a transitive the objective pronoun is often omitted, probably because the particle implies the completion of the action upon some object:
Basimu oroboraro aime gorobai, nukuito aime giiria, Basimu's wife then took (it, i.e., a crab previously mentioned) and put it inside the coconut shell.
Guguwario aigirowidirorumo, the wasps heard it (i.e., what was said).

The Conjugation of the Verb.

122. The Verbal expressions usually described under the headings of Person, Number, Tense and Mood are shown in Kiwai by numerous affixes and particles of a functional nature.
These may be Prefixes, Suffixes or Infixes, or separate words of form. They are used with the simple verbal word-base, with the plural and distributive forms, and with derivatives having radical suffixes or prefixes.

Person.

123. The Kiwai verb has inclusive and exclusive Personal forms.
The inclusive form distinguishes actions in which the speaker or those associated with him take part. The exclusive person shows persons or objects addressed, or referred to by the speaker. It is also used with nouns.

124. Inclusive:
The invariable sign of the inclusive person is n- prefixed to the verbal word-base, or to the tense sign when it precedes the verbal word-base. The inclusive prefix is used when the agent is indicated by any of the pronouns mo, nimo, nimoto or nimoibi. It is also used when these pronouns indicate the object of the verb. The particle does not change for tense, and follows the assertive particle ai.

Examples of Inclusive person:
1. Agent mo, I:
   Mo nigomutu n-omidiro, I with you stay.
   Mo irisinimabu ai-n-owagoria, I food possess.

Agent nimo, we:
   Nim no-i-trowaidurumo, we believe.
   Nimogo nau dubu ai-n-eauridurumo, we see one man.

Agent nimoto, we two:
   Nimotogo nou n-oweadurudo, we two found him.
Agent nimoibi, we three:

Nimoibi netewa nibidumo-imidai-amari, we three will take two.

2. The inclusive n- agrees with the objective pronouns mo, me; nimo, us; nimoto, us two; nimoibi, us three; when the agent is in the exclusive person:

Nouro moro n-orobairi, he me will receive.
Nigogo mai (mo ai) nidumo-eauriri, you me shall see.
Nimoto Ioane nimeriaiama, us two John sent.
Nimo iga nitamudirori? Us will you teach?

125. Exclusive:
The exclusive person is shown by the tense prefixes r- (present), g- (past) or w- (future). These agree with the agent shown by any of the pronouns ro, nigo, nigoto, nigoibi, nou, nei, neito or neibi. It is also used with nouns. The exclusive prefixes may follow the assertive particle ai, but do not agree with the objective pronouns.

Examples of the Exclusive person:

Agent, ro, thou:
Bo five uramigo giwagoria taugo, thou has had five husbands.
Ororo ai-w-eauriri, thou shalt see.
Ro ebeta rosoro? Thou whom seekest?

Agent nou, he, she, it:
Nou r-iriso, he eats.
Nouro nei g-imeriai, he them sent.
Nouro ai-w-iwagari, he will take them away.

Agent nigo, you:
Nigo g-iarugutirumo, you said.
Nigo ai-widumo-orowomiri, you shall sit.
Nigoto ebeta r-osora? You two whom seek?

Agent nei, they:
Nei aig-arogorumo, they said.
Neigo nou aiwidumo-opiari, they him will kill.
Nei ina g-eremororu damera rudo, when they came down from the hill.

126. Cf. also examples in paragraphs on Tense.

Noun as agent:
Oro mere ai-r-igiro, thy child lives.
Sa'i ina g-arasugumai, the sun when it went down.
Gi duburo w-irovidiro moro overa, that man will hear my word.

Number.

127. Kiwai verbal forms indicate the number of persons or objects acted upon, and also the number of agents performing the action.

128. Number of Objects:
This is shown by changes or additions to the verbal word-base. One object is indicated by the verbal base in its simple form with any initial vowel except i-.
The prefixes ar-, er-, or-, em-, ow-, emar-, emow-, erem-, orow-, owar- and owor- also imply a single object, or the performance of the action in one place. Cf. paragraphs 110-114 for examples.

If there be more than one object the initial of the verbal word-base becomes i-, or i is prefixed. Cf. paragraphs 110-114 for examples.

129. Verbs having the suffix -ti are used with the initial i- unless the separate actions indicated by the suffix are confined to one object.

Examples:
Abogoa, split one piece of wood at one stroke; iabogoa, split several pieces at one stroke; aboguti, split one piece by several strokes; iaboguti, split several pieces one at a time.
Aderio, move one thing; iaderio, move many at one time; aderiouti, move one thing several times; iaderouti, move several things one at a time, or in batches.
Opopai, knock once; opoguti, knock at the same several times; topoguti, knock at several.
Urai, shut, as a door, once; iurai, shut several at once; uruti, shut one several times; iuriutu, shut several separately; erurai, one shuts by itself; emurai, shut one off for some purpose; imurai, shut once off for several purposes; imuruti, shut several separately for several reasons.

130. When the action of the verb is upon two objects the initial i- is retained but -ama or -ma is suffixed to the verbal word-base, thus:
Eauri, see one; iauri, see several; iauriama, see two.
Oruso, eat one; iriso, eat several; irisoama, eat two.
Omidai, take one; imida, take several; imida, take two.

131. When the action of the verb is upon three objects, the initial i- is retained and -bi or -ibi is added to the verbal word-base, thus:
Irisoibi, eat three; imidaibi, take three.

132. The suffixes -ama and -bi agree with the dual or trial pronoun or noun in the objective case:
Neigo neito g-iratorioama-rumo, they them two asked two.
Nou sairo toribo pai owasebioama, his two legs (they did) not break two.
Mo nita kunu potoro owosabi wose ito, me just three loaves give three for a loan.
Mororo netewa naubi dubu potoro ainowiabi, I found three men (lit. I two one man three found three, iwia from owea, find).

So also the plural:
Nei sirio moni giiritirumo, they several (pieces of) money put into (a bag).
Nou netewa moni toribo giiriama, he two (pieces of) money put in.
133. In some examples of neuter verbs -ama appears to agree with the subject of the verb:

Neito imeime aiwidudo-tregeteiamari bobo ito, both (two all) will fall into a water hole (lit. two will fall two).

Also:

Gi didiri toribo gimeriaiama, ina gogurudo aime giwiarudo, those two men sent two, when they two went then they two found.

134. Number of Agents:

A single agent is shown by the pronoun in the singular number, or by the absence of the plural, dual or trial signs of tense:

Mo nomidai, I take; nou garogo, he said; ro widoguri, thou wilt go. The verbal bases are omidai, arogo, ogu.

135. More than three agents are shown by affixing -mo to the tense sign. This appears as a final suffix in present and past tenses, and as an infix in the future tenses:

Nimogo nau dubu aineaauriduru-mo, we see one man.
Neigo nou godomatidiroru-mo, they watched him.
Nigo widu-mo-oguri, you will go.

The word-bases are eaauri, odomatidiro, ogu.

136. Two agents are shown by -do affixed as in the plural -mo:

Nimotogo nau nori nomidaiduru-do, we two take one sweet potato.

Nigoto garogoru-do, you two said.

Nimoto nimidu-do-agiwairi, we two will give.

The verbal bases are omidai, arogo, agiwai.

137. Three agents are shown by prefixing bi- to the tense sign and suffixing -mo:

Nimobi nau nori nomidai-bi-duru-mo, we three take one sweet potato.

Nigobigo gotoboa-bi-ru-mo, you three stood.

Neibi aiwi-bim(o)-oguri, they three will go.

The verbal bases are omidai, otoboa, ogu.

For other examples see paragraphs on Tense.

Tense.

138. The time of an action is shown in Kiwai by the Personal Prefixes, by infixed and suffixed Particles, and by the position of the particles of Number.

a. The inclusive personal prefix n- is used in all tenses. In the exclusive present the personal prefix is r-, in the past g-, in the recent past and future w-. The assertive particle ai- may precede these.
b. The infix -\textit{duru}- before the sign of number (of agents) shows present time. Similarly -\textit{ru}- indicates the past, and -\textit{du}- the future.

c. All future tenses have the suffix -\textit{ri}.

d. In present and past tenses the suffix showing the number of agents forms the final of the verb complex. In future tenses the sign of number immediately precedes the verb-base.

The distinction between the person or persons addressed, and the person or persons spoken about, is not shown by the verb; separate pronouns must be used: \textit{ororo gomidai}, you (sing.) took one; \textit{nouro gomidai}, he took one; \textit{nigogo gomidai-rumo}, you took one; \textit{neigo gomidai-rumo}, they took one.

139. Present Tense:

The present tense is shown by -\textit{duru}- infixed between the verbal base and the sign of number. The inclusive personal prefix is \textit{n}-, the exclusive is \textit{r}-:

<table>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nei nomidai-durudo, they two take one.</td>
<td>Neibi nomidai-bidurumo, they three take one.</td>

If there are several objects taken the initial of the word-base becomes \textit{i}, and this appears throughout: \textit{imidai}, take several.

If there are three objects bi is suffixed: imidaibi, take three.

Inclusive.
Mo nimaibaibi, I take three.
Nimo nimaibaibi-durumo, we take three.
Nimo to nimaibaibi-durudo, we two take three.

Exclusive.
Ro rimibaibi, thou takest three.
Nigo rimibaibi-durumo, you take three.
Nigo to rimibaibi-durudo, you two take three.

When there are three agents and three objects, the bi of the trial is not repeated:

Inclusive.
Nimoibi nimaibaibi-durumo, we three take three.

Exclusive.
Nigoibi rimibaibi-durumo, you three take three.

Other examples:

Mororo didiri ainaiauri, I see men.
Nimo goboi nirarowodurumo, we now see.
Go roro tamaine riaruguti, now you plainly speak (iaruguti, say things pl. from arogo).
Neigo ariauridurumo, they see.
Oro mere ariqigrio, your child is alive.
Ni nuunumabu airospiridurumo, these things are hidden (lit. hide themselves).
Ni nuunumabu nigo dogoime ariauri-durumo, these things you now see.
Ebetoito roporiwo-durudo? Why do you untie?
No inaroro neneriairo, me that one sees. Cf. paragraph 124.

140. Past Tenses:

There are two past tenses. The recent past, and the definite past. The latter serves as the narrative tense. The completion of the action is shown by an adverb.

141. Recent Past:

This differs from the present only by the change of the exclusive personal prefix to w-, and the omission of the tense infix -duru-:

Nou worisiai, he is just dead (or has just died).
Nou womidai, he has just taken.
Nigo go virovidirurumo, you have just heard.
Gedaito nongubidurumo, while (we) three were going.

142. Definite Past:

This is shown by infixing -ru- instead of the -duru- of the present tense, and changing the exclusive personal prefix to g-:

Inclusive.
Mo nomidai, I took one.
Nimo nomidiairumo, we took one.

Exclusive.
Ro gomidai, thou tookest one.
Nou gomidai, he took one.
Nigo gomidairumo, you took one.
Nei gomidairumo, they took one.
Kiwai Grammar.

The number of agents and objects are shown as in the present tense.

Other examples:
Nei netewa pe aime girosutiamarumo irisina ito, they two boats then filled with fish.
Gi kirobo didiri aigaraauraiwadorumo pe rudo, the fisherman had gone ashore from the boat.
Sagaru pinio aigorobidiro, Sagaru carried a bag.
Nouro mai neauri, he saw me (paragraph 124).
Netewa didiritoribomeneitogogurudo, two men went.
Neibi aime gogubirumo nou gomoito, they three then went to him.
Neitogobowa gomirudo, they two sat by the road.
Neigougodomatidirorumou, they watched him.

143. Future Tenses:

There are three future tenses, a simple or immediate future, an indefinite, and a certain future.

All the future tenses have the suffix -ri, which comes at the end of the verbal complex. The signs of person, number and tense precede the verbal word-base instead of following it as in the present and past tenses.

144. Indefinite Future:

Indefinite action in the future is shown by the infix -du-. This is joined to the personal signs n- inclusive and w- exclusive by the link vowel i. The verbal base adds -ri. A single agent is shown by changing the -du- of the tense infix to -do-. More than one agent is shown by adding -mo (plural), -do (dual), -bi (trial) to the tense sign, the trial becoming bidumo. Thus the full prefixes are:—

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Inclusive</th>
<th>Exclusive</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Sing. nido-</td>
<td>Plural nidumo-</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dual nidudo-</td>
<td>Trial nibidumo.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The verb oguri, will go:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Inclusive.</th>
<th>Exclusive.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Mai nido-oguri, I will go.</td>
<td>Ro wido-oguri, thou wilt go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nimo nidumo-oguri, we will go.</td>
<td>Nou wido-oguri, he will go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nimoto nidudo-oguri, we two will go.</td>
<td>Nigo widumo-oguri, you will go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nimoibi nibidumo-oguri, we three will go.</td>
<td>Nei widumo-oguri, they will go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Nigoto widudo-oguri, you two will go.</td>

<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Nigoibi wibidumo-oguri, you three will go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Neibi wibidumo-oguri, they three will go.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Other examples are:—

Nimoto sirio niido-imidairi, we two will take many.
Nimoto netewa niido-imidaiamari, we two will take two.
Nimoibi netewa nibidumoimidaiamari, we three will take two.
Neito netewa wiido-iagiwaimari, they two will give two.
Dogotagu ro umorogo aiwidoitiri, afterwards you shall know (become knowing).

Gi oroboro beturoro widomidairi? Who will take that woman?
Niku nido-odiori, the cup I shall drink.
Mo niagiwairi, I will give one.
Netewa naub sa’i ina wibidumo-oriporogairi, when three days shall finish.
Mo novro nidowapotidirori, he shall speak about me (paragraph 124).

In some examples wir- is used instead of wid- or wido- in the exclusive singular, and wirim- or wirumo- in the exclusive plural, thus:—

Nou aime wiroguri, he shall come.
Nou wirorowameairi, he will return.
Baraara aime wiropugutiri, nou aime wirumo-emoburori, (he) will knock at the gate, then they will open for him.
Nigo ina wirumorowotoiri kirodumuti gido, when you stand up for praying.
Sagaru nou aiwirorowameairi, Sagaru will return.

145. Immediate Future:

Immediate action is shown by the omission of du in the plural, dual and trial forms of the indefinite future, and of ido in the singular. The prefixes appear thus:—

Inclusive:
Singular n-. Plural nimo-. Dual nido-. Trial nibimo-.

Exclusive:
Singular w-. Plural wimo-. Dual wido-. Trial wibimo-.

The o in the plural, dual and trial may be omitted before word-bases in o, but it is often written before other vowels.

The verb oguri, will go, is thus conjugated:

Inclusive.
Mai noguri, I will go.
Nimo nimooguri (pronounced ainimooguri), we will go.
Nimoto nidooguri, we two will go.
Nimoibi nibimoguri, we three will go.

Exclusive.
Ro woguri, thou wilt go.
Nou voguri, he will go.
Nigo wimoguri, you will go.
Nei wimoguri, they will go.
Nigoto widooguri, you two will go.
Neito widooguri, they two will go.
Nigoibi wibimoguri, you three will go.
Neibi wibimoguri, they three will go.
Other examples are:—

Mororo ainosiodivorori, I will do it.
Mo ainai ata duriomoro ito, I will go to another land.
Wario patu gonouto wimaradabutiri, hawks there shall assemble.
Didirigo aime wimoidabutiri, men then shall gather them.

Wimo is found sometimes contracted to imo as, e.g., imorobairi for wimorobairi, will take.

146. Remote Future:

The characteristic of the remote future is the infix mi. This indicates certain action in the future, and is very emphatic. The prefixes appear thus:—

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Inclusive</th>
<th>Exclusive</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Singular</td>
<td>Plural</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>nimi-</td>
<td>nimidumo-</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>rimi-</td>
<td>rimidumo-</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The future of the verb to go, oguri, is thus conjugated:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Inclusive</th>
<th>Exclusive</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Mai nimioguri, I will certainly go.</td>
<td>Rai rimioguri, thou wilt go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nimo ainimidumoguri, we will go.</td>
<td>Nour rimioguri, he will go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nimoto ainimidudo oguri, we two will go.</td>
<td>Nigo airimidumoguri, you will go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nimoibi aminimidumoguri we three will go.</td>
<td>Nei airimidudooguri, you two will go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nigoibi aminimidumoguri we three will go.</td>
<td>Neito airimidudooguri, they two will go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nigoibi aminimidumoguri we three will go.</td>
<td>Nigoibi aminimidumoguri, you three will go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Neibi aminimidumoguri they three will go.</td>
<td>Neibi aminimidumoguri, they three will go.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The prefix ai also indicates certainty. Cf. paragraph 115.

Mo wadego nimioitiri, I will become well.
O'i aime garogoroumo, Dogoime nimidumoodoutiri, the coconuts said, Now we will knock you (off).
Ni oboro nigo didiri imeime airimidumoodiori, this water you men all shall drink.
Imeime didiri nigoto rimidumoirisamari, all men shall eat you two.
Ni duburo wiiwaiamari abera ra maramu ubago, this man will find his father and mother bad.
Mo ebetaito nimiaiburi nidi oromodomoro? I in what (vessel) shall cross this ocean?

147. Habitual Action:

An action frequently or habitually performed is shown in present or past time by infixing a or aa after the personal prefixes which then become in the singular:

Inclusive Present and Past na- or naa-.
Exclusive Present ra- or raa-, Past ga- or gaa-.

The signs of tense and number are added to these, and the compound precedes the verbal base thus:—

Plural Present inclusive, nadumo- or naadumo-exclusive, radumo- or raadumo-Past inclusive, narumo-exclusive, garumo-

Dual Present inclusive, narudo-exclusive, gadurudo-Past inclusive, narudo-exclusive, gaarudo-

Trial Present inclusive, naibidumo-exclusive, rabidumo-
Past (no examples found).

The emphatic particle go is usually suffixed to the verbal base.

Examples:
Nanito naaitomugo, I am (or was) always preaching.
Nou ngomutu raomigo, he stays with you.
Esariburo nou epoo nirowa raomigo, Esariburo lives inside a mound.
Mau toribo nigoto ubaime gadurudoaraogo, you two mothers walk very badly.
Roro abera gedaro mo rai (ro ai) narudoosorago, thy father and I have been seeking thee.
Nou abera ra maramu ra sorismo gomoito aigaruudoidiai-wadogo, his father and mother used to go up to the feast.
Nei airadumoirdumutiti, they pray continually.
Nei radumoirisogo, they are always eating.
Nigo morogomoa aiagarumoowomigo, you have been with me continually.
Nigoibi irisinabu ebetawa rabidumo-itutigo? Where do you three usually cook (your) food?
Nimoibi irisinamabu sa'igido naibidumoiarumutigo, we three always dry (our) food in the sun.
Didirigo mo betuto nadumoosorugo? What do men call me?

148. Future Habitual:
This is formed by infixing a after the future prefixes, and immediately before the word-base. The a usually takes the place of the final o of the future prefix.

Examples:
Mororo ainidaiaruguti, I will always talk about them.
Nigo nimogo ainiduma-itoobutigo, we will always bite you.
Gonuwato nei idobi aiwiduma-irotutiri, there they will always be shedding tears.
Ro didiri aiwidairobogo, thou shalt catch men.
Suwo inaro waaraori, the one that will walk about serving.
Nigogo mo ainidumaeauri, you see me always (paragraph 124).

Some of these examples show the omission of the future suffix ri, or the use of go in its place. In the following ri is added to the verbal prefix and go to the verbal base:
Neigo aiwidumari-imosogo, they shall always cast them out.
Nei orio wototorope aiwidumari iarugutirigo, they shall speak (with) new tongues.

149. Completed Action:
A completed action is shown by the adverb tau preceding either of the past tenses:
Moro damario dogoime tau weauri, my eye now has just seen.
Mo uba tau nosiodiro, I evil have done.
Ororo nou tau geauri, you have already seen him.
Nigogo nou tau weaurirumo, you have just seen him.
Nou tau goguro, he has already come.
Sai tau warasugu, the sun has just set.
Nimotogo nou tau noweadurudo, we two have found him.

150. Incomplete Action:
An action begun, but not finished, is shown by infixing og to the past tense:
Aigogosumirigo, it has begun to wither (osumiri).
Nouro neito aime gogirosodoraiama, he started to leave them two (orosodorai, separate one's self).
Mai nogorisiaigo durugere rudo, I am dying from hunger.
Og may be an abbreviation of the verb ogu, go.

151. Repeated Action:
Repetition of an action is shown by the particle amu preceding the verb:
Nou amu giriso, he eats over and over again.
Nei soriomo amu gosiodirorumu, they again made a feast.

The Negative.

152. The Negative in Present and Past time is shown by the word pai, used with the verbal base in the singular or plural agreeing with the object. The distinction of Present and Past is shown only by an Adverb.

Present:
Mo pai uramu owagoria, I have no husband (owagoria, possess).
Nei pai duriomoro wruuruwato orowomi, they do not live under the ground.
Mo pai ogu simaraime, I am not come by myself.
Nigogo mo pai irowai, you do not believe me.
Past:

Sidoro pai agiwai Gibunogeregido, Sido did not give (it) to Gibunogere.
Neito pai uwo irouama Dawanewa, they two did not lie down to sleep at Dawane.
Nouro gama pai ododo, he did not beat the drum.

153. Cessation of an action is shown by pai and the forms of the habitual:

Nou pai rairiso, he is not always eating.
Nei pai raeregediogo, they do not always work.
Pai dogo raaraogo noumutu, did not walk any more with him.
Nou pai raatamudirogo, he never learned.

154. Future Negative:

This is shown by pai with the participle, and -go suffixed:

Mo pai kogugo, I will not go.
Osiomere ra buseremere ra pai kirisogo, the boys and girls will not eat.
Nou gonouto pai kodorogo, he will not go in there.
Nigo pai kemodorutigo, you will not go in for it.
Didirigo neito pai kwosodaiamago, men them two shall not separate.

The number of agents may be shown by infixing -toribo- or -bi- before the final -go. The verb "to go" appears thus:

Inclusive.
Mo pai kogugo, I will not go.
Nimo pai kogugo, we will not go.
Nimoto pai kogutoribogo, we two will not go.
Nimotibi pai kogubigo, we three will not go.

Exclusive.
Ro pai kogugo, thou wilt not go
Nou pai kogugo, he will not go.
Nigo pai kogugo, you will not go.
Nei pai kogugo, they will not go.
Nigoto pai kogutoribogo, you two will not go.
Neito pai kogutoribogo, they two will not go.
Nigoibi pai kogubigo, you three will not go.
Neibi pai kogubigo, they three will not go.

Used alone with a noun or other word, pai is equivalent to "is not" or "have not":

No pai oboiago, this is not a real waterbottle.
Mo pai maramu ra abera ra, I have no mother and father.

155. The negative suffix -tato may be added to verbal word-bases. This is almost equivalent to an adjective:

Ota iopu oriruti-tato, tree fruit bearing-not, unfruitful tree.
Nigo kemaea nuuna iauritato, your wonder things (are) not seeing, you don't see wonders,
156. The intensive suffix -la may be added to pai and -ime may be added to -tato.

157. Other aspects of the negative are dealt with in the following sections:—

- Negative Interrogative, paragraph 82.
- Negative Adjectives, paragraph 60.
- Negative Participle, paragraph 161.
- Negative Imperative, paragraph 167.
- Negative Adverb, paragraph 192.

Mood.

158. In Kiwai certain aspects of the verb akin to Mood in other languages may be described under the headings of:—

1. Participle.
2. Infinitive.
3. Imperative.
4. Permissive.
5. Conditional.

Participle.

159. The prefix k- forms a verbal noun or adjective from any of the simple or compound verbal word-bases:

Nouns:

- Didiri kiriwoto, men killing, murder.
- Nimo nonouwa korowomi, our here sitting.
- Overa kirimowogomuti, speech impediment, from ogomuwai, put in the mouth.

Adjectives:

- Keauri didiri, seeing men, men who saw.
- Kirobo didiri, fishing men, i.e., catchers, from irobo, to catch, pl. of orobai.
- Kirovidiro gare sia, hearing ear holes.

160. The participle may be used with the noun suffixes, thus:—

wa:

- Nou moto mabu kedeawa, in putting a foundation to his house (lit. his house foundation in putting).
- Ro k-iromutin-wa, in your praying, or, when you pray.
- Mo k-orowameai-wa, on my return.
- Ogoro buni ra usu ra bogame ra paparua ra k-iwia-wa, on your finding (iwia, find many), buni, usu, bogame and paparua (trees).
- Ro koguwa, at your coming.

wato:

- Nou kiwotoi wato, at its fruiting.

gaute:

- Odori, mo mere korisiai gaute, come down before my child dies (lit. from my child's dying).
- Nigo kirimuso gaute, lest you stumble (lit. from your stumbling).
Kiwai Grammar.

gido:

Obo owosa kodio gido, give water for drinking.

This usually expresses the infinitive mood. Cf. paragraph 162.

161. Negative Participle:

The suffix -tato, usually in its adverbial form -tatoime, forms a negative participle:

Mo ogutatoime, my not coming.
Mo agaritato, my non-departure.

Infinitive Mood.

162. The infinitive mood following a finite verb is shown by the participle with the suffix -gido:

Neito mere osioburo rudo reremeiriai upi kimade, their child from youth begins to attract women (er-emeiriai, begin of his own accord; kimade from adia, to kindle).

Gi orobo nou ubi oboito kiraro gido, that woman wishes (her wish) into the water to jump.

Owapotai nougido moro kowarebai gido, tell him to assist me.

Gomioi kiriso gido, sat down to eat.

Nou goguro iopu kiosora gido, he came to seek fruits.

Imperative.

163. The simple word-bases and word-bases modified by the radical prefixes and suffixes are used as imperatives with no special sign: ogu, come; omidai, take one; iagiwai, give many; iagiwuti, give out or distribute many; aratateai, move yourself out of the way (to one); aratatuti, move yourselves (many) out of the way; nou tu ra sairo imosiritiama, his hand and foot bind them two; iwaratatuti ni nnunnum- abu, take these things away (move yourselves with several things, from atateai, to move something); irimowame, sell (change several of your own accord); nonowwato omibi, sit ye three here.

With verbs implying movement auto is prefixed for emphasis; -toribo or -bi is suffixed in dual and trial as in future negative:

Auto ogu, go, go away; auto arario, run away; auto aratateai, clear out, get out of the way; gi orobo auto emeriai, send that woman away; auto iramedei toribo, get you two into the bush.

Au the sign of repetition, with the g- of go showing incompleteness is also prefixed for emphasis:

Augiauri, watch them, repeatedly and unceasingly look at them.
Augisiodiro, do them always.

164. Future Imperative:

This indicates an action ordered to be done at a future time. It is shown by the prefix d-:

Deauri, look by and by.
Dorowameai samoito, come back quickly.
Dowoguro, bring (it) back.
Other examples show the tense infixes, and suffixes -do and -mo showing the number of persons ordered:

Darogodurudo, say ye two.
Dorobairumo, hold him fast, catch him.

Also the habitual infix da may be used:
Nimo nanito daiomoriago gi kunuro, us always give that bread.

165. The assertive particle ai may be used: aidorobai, catch it; aidomidai, take it, i.e., actually catch or take it. But the emphatic go is added to ai and both are then prefixed to a-.

The compound prefix then indicates an action which must or shall be performed:
Sido aigod-otoobutimo, you must or shall bite Sido.
Aigodopirivorudo, you two shall loose them.
Aigodipirivwoama, loose them two.

Aigid- is also found but the reason for changing -go- to -gi- is not clear:
Aigidogurumo morogido kowapotai gido, you must come to tell me.

166. An imperative of milder meaning is shown by prefixing numa to the imperative sign a-.

Numa expresses indifference or uncertainty:
Numadiauri moro maramu gedaro moro niraramigo, just look at my mother and brothers.
Mumadogiauri, just go and see (ogiauri for ogu, go; iauri, see).
Mo numademeriai, send me.

167. Negative Imperative:
Dau with g or go added is used as a prohibitive "you must not," or "you shall not":
Daugogu gonouto, don't go there, you must not go there.
Suquba daugodio, don't smoke.
Overa daugiaruguti, don't talk (from arogo).

168. A stronger prohibition is shown by the word betu with g-prefixed to the verb. It carries a sense of time equivalent to the English "don't ever":
Piroito betugimade, by theft do not take things (imade from omidai), do not steal.
Betugarogo, don't tell, keep it a secret.
Oro duboi dubu gido warame overa betugarogo, to your neighbour a false word never tell.

Permissive.

169. The particle nu signifies permission. It is prefixed to the assertive particle when used with the inclusive person, as nuai- or nuwai-:
Nuwai-nogurumo, let us go.
Netewa naubi moto nuai-nidididurumo, let us build three houses.
In the exclusive person \textit{nu-} is prefixed to \textit{aime}, as \textit{nuaim-} or \textit{nuwaim}:

\begin{itemize}
\item \textit{Nuwaim-erea}, let him be, leave it alone; in the plural \textit{nuwaim-eria}, let them be, leave them alone.
\item \textit{Nuaim-orisiai}, let him die.
\item \textit{Nuaim-ogurumo}, let them come.
\end{itemize}

Sometimes \textit{nuai-} is prefixed with the ordinary personal prefix \textit{r-} instead of \textit{m}:

\begin{itemize}
\item \textit{Nei simara paara didiri nuai-rigubiritirumo}, their own dead men let them bury them.
\item \textit{Nouro num-irovidiro}, let him hear.
\end{itemize}

In translations \textit{m} is generally separated from \textit{nuai-} and prefixed to the verb: \textit{nuai-merea}, etc.

Conditional.

170. A permission contingent upon something being previously done is shown by \textit{noiri} equivalent to "may then," used as an adverb with the verb in the future:

\begin{itemize}
\item \textit{Oporigai ninaro, ro noiri woguri kirobogido}, finish this, you may then go to fish.
\item \textit{Nou nuaim-ororuwo, nimogo nou noiri nimidumo- irowairi}, him let descend, we him then will believe.
\end{itemize}

171. \textit{Bia} indicates an action which should, might, or ought to have taken place. It is used with \textit{n} in the inclusive person, but with \textit{t} in the exclusive:

\begin{itemize}
\item \textit{Bia nogu noumutu}, I should have gone with him.
\item \textit{Mo bia nemeriai Amosiro}, Amos should have sent me.
\item \textit{Nimo aberamigo mutu bia norowomi}, if we had lived with our ancestors.
\item \textit{Nou biatogu noumutu}, he should have gone with him.
\item \textit{Ni idiro bia-t-owamerumo}, this ointment they might have sold.
\item \textit{Moro moni ororo bia-t-irimowaime, mo korowameawa, mororo bia niwia moro moni wisa mutu}, my money you should have sold (exchanged), at my return, I should have found my money with interest (pay).
\end{itemize}

Other examples with \textit{nigo}, you, are:

\begin{itemize}
\item \textit{Nigo umorogo bia wiria}, if you had (just) been aware.
\item \textit{Nigo ninaro bia-tisiodirorumo}, you these (things) ought to have done.
\end{itemize}

Sentences Without Verbs.

172. A sentence may be expressed in Kiwai without a verb. The omission is usual when a noun or pronoun is in apposition with another word:

\begin{itemize}
\item \textit{Neito kirobo didiritoribo}, they (were) two fishermen.
\item \textit{Nei pai moto, pai era, pai irisinamabu}, they (had) no house, no fire, no food.
\end{itemize}
Kiwai Grammar.

Nei auwoia samo, they (were) very glad.
Mo pai wadeiago, I (am) not very good.
Nou paina Gabia, his name (is, was) Gabia.
Nigoto pura umorogo? (are) You two aware? Don't you two know?

The Verb "to be."

173. There is no direct equivalent of the substantive verb in Kiwai. Its place is supplied by the auxiliary verbs.

Auxiliary Verbs.

174. The verbs erea, owai, oiti are very commonly used to form verbal phrases. Orou, otoi and omi, are also found.

Erea:

Erea, to remain, to lie, to be, is used of objects in fixed positions which do not move. It carries an idea of permanence. The plural used of several objects is iria, dual iriama, trial iriaibi. Person, number and tense are shown by the usual prefixes and suffixes:

Momoko goboi rerea, there is (lies) a mountain.
Kadabuai aigerea, there was a wedding.
Nou erea warame dubu, he is (remains) a liar.
Gama overa budo giria? Where are the drum sounds?

The noun ubi, wish, is used in paraphrases with erea as a desiderative: mo ubi airerea, my wish it remains, I wish. The verbal form agrees with the number of persons wishing, but may be singular when one wish is made, as, e.g., Nigo ubi ebetagido rerea? What is your wish?

Inclusive.
Mo ubi airerea, I wish, etc.
Nimo ubi airiria.
Nimoto ubi aiririama.
Nimoibi ubi aiririaibi.

Exclusive.
Ro ubi airerea.
Nou ubi airerea.
Nigo ubi airiria-mo.
Nei ubi airiria-mo.
Nigoto ubi airiria-mo.
Netto ubi airiria-mo.
Nigoibi ubi aiririaibi.
Netibi ubi aiririaibi.

The negative is ubitato erea.

Other examples:

Ro aime wido-oguri ro ubitatoime gi ipiti wido-ereari kogu gido, you shall come to that place you will not wish to go to (ubitatoime, no wish at all; widoereari, will remain; kogu-gido, to go).

Didiri ubi ginagido wiriari, for whomsoever the people will wish (didiri ubi, people's wish; ginagido, for that one).

Nigo ubi iga riria? What are your wishes?

Erea is not used with ubi when desiring something to eat or drink:

Mo ubi obo kodio gido, I wish water for drinking.
Kiwai Grammar.

175. Erea is also frequently omitted before an infinitive:

Didiri nei ubi kiauri gido, men wish to see them.
Nou ubi nou kopia gido, he wished to kill him.

176. Erea is used with various nouns and adjectives to form verbal phrases. In such cases the emphatic particle go is often added to the noun or adjective:

Mo nirimagare airerea orogido, my pity remains for you, I love (or pity) you.
Ni oiro ubaime rerea, this coconut is bad.
Ni oitoribo ubaime ririama, these two coconuts are bad.
Gi moto wade ereatatato, that house is (or was) not good.
Netto modoboime aime wiriamari, they two will remain equal.
Ro umoro biatera, if you were knowing, if you knew.
Nei umoro go giria, they were cognizant, they knew.

177. Otoi:

Otoi, stand, is used of trees and mountains instead of erea:

Auwo damera goboi rotoi, there is a big hill (big hill there stands).
No ebeta ota rotoi? What tree is this? (What tree stands?).
No ebeta nuunumabu rogorowotoigo? What are these things standing up? (of food plants, with prefixes go, or, ow, standing up with something, of their own accord, continuously).

178. Orou:

Orou is used of persons or things lying down:

Nou uwo goroudiro, he was asleep, lying asleep.
Duvo uwo ina giroubi, night when three slept.
Uwo aime girouama, then two were asleep.
Auwoia mataru aime gorou, there was a great calm.

179. Orowomi, omi:

To be in a place, of persons, is expressed by omi, orowomi, to stay:

Nei gonouwato gaorowomigo, they were always there.
Nimo abera aromoipiwa romidiro, our father (who) is in heaven.
Nimo sa'iwegi norowomi, we are here having a spree.
Gonouwa domi, stay there, be there, remain there (imperative).
Nonowato omibi, remain here (to three).
Gonouwa nau dubu aigomidiro, a man was there.

180. Owai:

Owai (plural object iwai) means to make, cause to become. It is very commonly used with adjectives and is almost equivalent to a causative. The emphatic particle go is usually added to the adjective and owai appears as wai: uba, bad; ubago wai, make bad, spoil, defile.

In construction the adjective may follow the verb, or be separated from it: didiri neigo wirimowairi ubago or didiri ubago neigo wirimowairi, men they will make bad, or men bad they will make (neigo nominative).
Inclusive.
Mororo nowai ubago, I have spoiled it.
Nimogo nowaidurumo ubago.
Nimotogo nowaidurudo ubago.
Nimoibigo nowaibidurumo ubago.

Exclusive.
Rororo rowai ubago.
Nouro rowai ubago.
Nigogo rowaidurumo ubago.
Netogo rowaidurudo ubago.
Nigotogo rowaidurudo ubago.
Netitogo rowaidurudo ubago.
Nigotibo rowaibidurumo ubago.
Nebiigo rowaibidurumo ubago.

Owai takes the usual prefixes and suffixes of number, person and tense.

The following are examples of words with owai:—

Wadego kowaigido, to heal him.
Wadego kiwai gido, to heal them.
Nouro neito pai ubago iwaiana, he did not harm them two.
Maipu airai kirobo gido, Poto umorogo wai, Maipu is going to fish, let Poto know.
Nou imeime wadego giwai, he made all well.

The prefix em- plural im- is found with owai:

Nei temeteme wadego kimowai gido, to have their sicknesses cured.

The prefix or- may be used:

Didiri eamogo korowaime, people becoming noisy.

181. Oiti:

Oiti, meaning "to become," is used with other words in the same way as owai. The negative oiti-tato is also found: umorogo oiti, become cognizant, know, understand; ubago oiti, become bad, rot; ioputato oiti, become fruitless, bear no fruit; kavitato oiti, become straight; didirigo oiti, become human.

Some examples are:—

Ni oiro ubago tau woiti, this coconut has just become rotten.
Ni oiro ubago tau oiti, this coconut has become rotten, has been rotten for some time.
Nei torego aime goitirumo, then they became afraid.
Didiri nei dowago airoitidurumo, the men are becoming angr
Nou awoogo aiwoitiri, he will become great.
Adimogo ina goiti, when it became evening.
Neito pai umorogo oiti toribo, they two will not understand.

Oiti is used of age:

Gi osio nou norogo aime goiti, then the child grew up (became grown).
Nou twelve urato ina goiti, when he became twelve years old (when his twelfth year became).

The defining word may follow:

Neibi duduere goitibirumo umorogo, in the morning they three understood.
182. Owea:

Owea, find, is sometimes equivalent to "is." The plural is iwia, negative oweatato or pai owea:

- Nigo durugerero aiwidumo-iwiari, you shall be hungry (shall find hunger).
- Nou kigiro owea, he is alive (finds life).
- Sidoro mosio rudo gowe’a, Sido from afar perceived (found) him.

183. It should be noted that erea, orou, otoi, orowomi, omi and oiti are in meaning intransitive; owai and owea are transitive.

Irregular Verbs.

184. There are very few irregularities in the conjugation of the verbs. This is in marked contrast to the irregular nature of the verbal word-bases. The verb ogu, go, is thus conjugated in the present tense:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Inclusive</th>
<th>Exclusive</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Mai nogu, I go.</td>
<td>Rau togu, thou goest.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nimo nogudurumo, we go.</td>
<td>Auto rogu, he goes.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nimoto nogudurudo, we two go.</td>
<td>Nigo rogu durumo, you go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nimoibi nogubidurumo, we three go.</td>
<td>Nei rogu durumo, they go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nigoto nogudurudo, you two go.</td>
<td>Nigoto rogu durudo, you two go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Neito rogu durudo, they two go.</td>
<td>Nigoibi rogu bidurumo, you three go.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Neibi rogu bidurumo, they three go.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The simple base ogu is used as the imperative "come."

Autoogu is used as the imperative "go forward."

The exclusive singular forms rautoagu and autorogu cannot be explained. Nou rogu is used for "he comes." With the particle ai, nou airogo, he comes at a distance; nou airogu, he is coming quite near; nei airogurumo, they are coming, have actually started.

Composite Verbs.

185. There are very few examples of composite verbs in Kiwai.

Ogu, go, is sometimes prefixed to another verb:

- Numad-og-iauri, just go and look at them.
- Moro pe sawa og-emetigiri, I will go and set up the canoe sail.

Cf. paragraph 150.

ADVERBS.

Derivation.

186. In Kiwai the final syllable of the verbal word-bases, and the radical affixes to the word-bases are of an adverbial nature. Other adverbs are formed from nouns and adjectives by suffixes, and from demonstrative and interrogative words. Hence real adverbs are few.

The final syllable of the word-base (Cf. paragraphs 98-103):

- Agurai, to nod once; aguro, to keep nodding.
Kiwai Grammar.

Iagiwai, to give many at once; iagiwuti, to give many by instalments.

The radical affix to the word-base (Cf. paragraphs 104-110):
Adau, to run away; adaudiro, to keep on running away.
Imeriai, to begin many things at once; imeriaiwado, to begin many things one after the other.

187. Adverbs are formed by the suffixes ito and ime from nouns and adjectives:
Erapo, power; erapoito, strongly.
Daro, slow; daroito, slowly.
Tagara, old time, former; tagaraime, formerly.
Ere, a piece; ereere, separate; erereime, apart.

In a few words of this form the primitive does not appear:
Waito, carefully; gaime, distant.

In other words the derivation is obscure:
Nanito, always, but nani, true; samoito, quickly, but samo, glad; tamaine, openly, but tama, skin.

Wa, the locative suffix, is used with local nouns to form adverbs of place. Cf. paragraph 196.

Bo and go also appear as suffixes to adverbs:
Gibo, thus; bonibo, in that direction, further on. Cf. paragraph 25.
Taugo, beforehand; dogo, by and by, later. Cf. paragraphs 145, 149, 164.

The words abora sa'i, to-day; aboraduwo, to-night, suggest adoption from Tureture and Mawata.

Adverbs are also formed from Demonstrative Pronominal and Interrogative words. Cf. paragraphs 23-27 and 76-79.

Grouping of Adverbs.

188. For convenience the words used as adverbs in Kiwai are grouped as follows:—

Adverbs of Time.

Dogome, now, at once, soon.  Ina, when.
Nisa'i, to-day.  Aime, then.
Aboro sa'i, to-day.  Nanito, always.
Duduwo, to-morrow.  Nanitonanito, for ever.
Aboraduwo, to-morrow.  Nuwa, again.
Duwomutu, day after to-morrow.  Mina, again.
Duwotou, yesterday.  Pai tuturu, soon, presently.
Tagaraime, formerly.  Wapobia, late.
Tau, already.  Sirio tagu, often.
Taugo, before, first time.  Sa'i gabugabu, daily, every day.
Waporudo, afterwards.  Dogo, by and by.
Duduere ito, in the morning.  Ianana, last, last time.
Osore, early.  Tagu nouia wa, at that time.
In addition to these, some verbal constructions and various affixes are equivalent to adverbs of time. Such are: The finals of the verbal word-bases (paragraphs 98-103); Verbal suffixes and prefixes (paragraphs 104-114); Certain separable particles.

Directive Adverbs.

189. These are mostly formed from the demonstratives. Cf. paragraphs 25-27:

_Nido_, towards me, in this direction; _nita_, here, in this direction;
_gido_, away from me, on the farther side; _bonibo_, that way, farther in that direction; _giato_, there, at a distance.

An idea of direction is inherent in many verbs of motion:
_Osoruo_, go out; _odorao_, go in; _ororuko_, go or come down from a place; _idiai_, go up or come down from a place; _airio_, come shoreward; _odori_, go down.

In some cases reverse directions are both indicated:
_Amododorai_, take from one place to another.
_Orosumo_, go up and down.
_Iorurio_, climb up and down.
_Ototozurio_, keep sitting and rising.

Adverbs of Place.

190. These are mostly formed from Nouns, especially Local Nouns
(Cf. paragraph 196):

_Noboi_, here.
_Goboi_, there.
_Gopeito_, in front, before.
_Waporudo_, behind, last.
_Sia sito_, in the middle.
_Sia wato_, between.
_Niro_, inside.
_Uruuru_, inside, as in cave or drawer.
_Siwa_, on outside.
_Sito_, to the outside.
_Ipiwa_, in the midst.

_Ererasewato_, beside.
_Osu_, above.
_Osuwa_, on top.
_Osurudo_, down, from above.
_Sopuwa_, on ground, below.
_Sopurudo_, from below.
_Sopo uruuruwa_, underneath.
_Gigiri wa_, on the beach.
_Poto ito_, to shore.
_Tatari_, near.
_Gaime_, far.

Adverbs of Manner.

191. Most adjectives may be changed to adverbs of manner by the suffix _ime_, and intensified by the suffixes _ia_ and _go_.

_Nani_, true; _nanime_, truly; _naniia_, very true; _naniiaime_, very truly.

_Gibo_, thus.
_Gedagibo_, like this, even so, as.
_Natura_, naturaime, only.
_Waito_, carefully.
_Modobo_, modoboime, equally.
_Erereime_, separately.
_Sapuwoito_, apart.

_Na'ume_, suddenly.
_Erapoito_, strongly, firmly, earnestly.
_Dorogoraime_, freely, gratis.
_Menaime_, secretly.
_Tamaime_, openly.
_Obiaime_, obiarime, in vain.
Kiwai Grammar.

Daroito, slowly.
Samoito, quickly.
Sio, quickly, with arario, run.

Oiwori, aimlessly.
Didi, for nothing.

The equivalents of some adverbs of manner are indicated by verbal forms or suffixes:
Voluntarily, of one's own accord, by prefix ar, er, -or. Cf. paragraph 111.
Very, by the suffix ia. Cf. paragraph 12.
Especially, by the intensive suffix -go. Cf. paragraph 11.

Affirmative and Negative Adverbs.

192. The particles of emphasis serve as affirmative adverbs. Cf. paragraphs 12, 13. The assertive particle ai, and the exclamation Io! are also used.

The negative adverb is pai, not, and -tatoime is used as a negative adverbial affix to verbs:

Samoia iauritatoime bedigoro, very happy is one not seeing (very-glad not-seeing who).

POSTPOSITIONS.

193. There are no prepositions in Kiwai. Their equivalents are found in noun-suffixes, postpositions, verbal prefixes and the cases of local nouns.

Noun-suffixes and Postpositions.

194. The syllables suffixed to nouns are not always clearly distinguished from the separate postpositions. Natives prefer to write ito, gido, rudo, gaute, separately because they lengthen the words. But these terminations are usually written in one with pronouns and short words.

Examples of noun-suffixes have been given in the sections on Nouns—Case (paragraphs 45-55). For convenience of reference they are here tabulated:

1. Ito, to, motion to a place (paragraph 49).
2. Gido, for, for the purpose of, in order to (paragraph 49).
3. Rudo, motion from a place, out of a place, away from (paragraph 50).
4. Gaute, from a person or object, originating from, arising from, caused by (paragraph 51).
5. A, wa, in, at a place (paragraph 52).
6. Wato, on (paragraph 52).
7. Mutu, with, along with a person (paragraph 53).
8. Ramu, with, along with a thing (paragraph 53).
9. Ramutu, with, along with (paragraph 53).
10. Ito, instrumental, by, with, by means of (paragraph 54).
11. Ri, because of, on account of, for (paragraph 55).
A Postposition may be separated from its noun by patu or gabugabu:

Duriomoro patu wato, in the land; duriomoro gabugabu rudo, from every land.

Verbal Prefixes.

195. The verbal prefixes em-, im- and ow-, iw- are equivalent to the English prepositions "for" and "with":

Ogu, go; em-ogu, go for, fetch; ow-ogu, come with, bring. Cf. paragraphs 112-113.

Local Nouns.

196. These are names of positions used with the suffixes:—

1. Gomo, side of a person (gomoito, gomorudo, gomoa or gomowa).
2. Gope, front (gope ito, gopeva). Muba gope is generally used of persons.
3. Wapo, rear (waporudo); wapagabo, back way, is also found.
4. Mabu, bottom, foundation, reason, cause, sake (mabuwato).
5. Osu, top (osuto, osurudo, osua or osuwa, osuwato).
6. Sopu, ground (soputo, sopurudo, sopua, sopuwato).
7. Niro, inside (niroito, nirorudo, nirowa, nirowato). Magumoa, heart, is often used with niro (niror magumoit, niror magumowa).
8. Ipi, the middle place (ipito, ipiwa, ipiwato).
9. Sia, hole, space between (siaito, siarudo, siawa). Ipsia is also found.
10. Si, the outside (sito, sirudo, siwa). Siwa may be used as an adjective, hence siwarudo, siwaito, siwawa are also found.
11. Sapuwo, direction, side of a place (sapuwoito, sapuworudo, sapuwowa, sapuwato).
12. Erese, edge of a place, side of path, sea, hill, etc. (eresewa, erese wato). The edge of a weapon is i'o; of a garment, ipusu (lip).

197. A local noun forms a genitive phrase with the noun or pronoun to which it relates:

Obo osuwato, water's top on, on the water.
Moto siawa, house's outside at, outside the house.
Gabo eresewato, path's edge on, on the wayside.
Nou waporudo, his rear from, behind him.

Gomo ito, gomo wa (or gomoa), gomo rudo are used for to, at, or from, a person, instead of the simple postpositions.

CONJUNCTIONS.

198. These are usually composite words or phrases. Though corresponding more or less to the conjunctions of other languages, they are of very indefinite use.
199. Copulative:

Ra is used to join nouns. Gedaro may be translated "also," or "likewise":

Imeime irisina paina aime gioputi, Bata ra dogara ra pairo ra duwomu, gedaro baidamo ra gaboro, all fish names (she) then enumerated, Bata and dogara and pairo and duwomu, also baidamo and gaboro.

Sa'i ra duwo, day and night.

Oro abera ra oro maramu, thy father and thy mother.

Siogo ina girisorumo o'i wasina gedaro obo, the dog then ate coconut flesh also water.

Godo-o imeime wago ra baribari, gedaro kasi ra paara, pulled off every young nut and drinking nut, also the hard and dead nuts.

Also with pronouns:

Nigo ra nimo ra gido, for you and us.

200. Adversative:

This is not shown except by contrasting statements:

Nou paara aime goroudiro, pai naniia paara, she then lay down dead, (but) not really dead.

Nou kiwotoi wato, go wade; swotoitato, wade nuato widegebari, it (is) in fruit bearing, that (is) good, (it is) not fruitful, good then it shall be cut down.

Moro overa pai moro nuunago, mo ginaro nemeriairo nou nuunaie, my word is not mine really, (but) his really that sent me (me that one sent his real thing).

201. Disjunctive:

Eboro is used for "or," "whether":

Abera eboro maramu eboro orobora eboro mere patu, father or mother or wife or children.

Beda nuunumabu auwoia, kigiro eboro irisinimabu, which thing is great, life or food?

In the negative gedaro is found with the negative particle. But gedaro is often omitted:

Pai ata duburo orogiomai gedaro pai odio, no other man touched nor drank.

Pai ni dubu nou uba tanarogo, pai nou abera, not this man's bad conduct, nor (not) his father's.

202. Conditional:

"If" or "when" is expressed by ina, or by the locative case of the verbal noun:

Nou uwogo ina roroudiro, go nou aiworosiodirori, he asleep when he lies, that will restore him (lit. make himself).

Nou ina gogu tatarito, when he came near.

Neigo ina geaurirumo, when they saw.
The locative particle may be used for "if":

Mo kagariwa, aimidoemeriairi nigo gomoito, if I depart (lit. in my going away) I will send (him) to you.

Mororo karogowa nigo gido, if I tell you (in my telling to you).

Nina kosiodirowa, mo augemaratateai, in doing this always remember me.

A possible occurrence may be shown by the word inawoo, if, when, at any time indefinitely:

Ro inawoo odori, buto aigodeauri, if (or when) you go down (to the beach) look out for the boat.

Roro damarirò ro inawoo owai ubago, osiai, if thine eye makes thee bad, pluck it out.

ILLATIVE. There is no conjunction, but the verbal noun with gido is used for "so that," and with gaute for "that not":

Mai nimioguri nau ipi korosiodiro gido nigogido, I will go one place to prepare (for preparing) for you (so that I prepare for you).

Rororo nimo emeriai boromo ito kemodoruti gido, you send us (so that we) enter the swine.

Nou moto aime imemowagediori nou kadau gaute, (they) surround his house so that he could not get away (lit. his house then will surround from his running away).

Mo gi oboro owosa, mo obo durugerero koweia gaute, give me this water so that I do not thirst (me this water give, me water hunger from finding).

Cf. also the word noiri, paragraph 170.

203. Causal:

The word mabu, cause, with the demonstrative gonou, this, is used for "therefore," "because":

Mabu nei tore aigiriarumo didiri gaute, because they feared the people (reason they fear had from men).

Mabu nigo pai ubi moro overa kirovidiro gido, because (reason) you do not wish to hear my words.

Mabu gonou mororo nigo kimeriai nou gomoito, because I sent you to him (reason this my sending you to him).

204. Quotation:

A quotation is introduced by gibó, thus:

Nouro abera aime gemowameai gibó, Mai noguri, buaraigo, He father then answered thus, I go, sir.

Ataro aime garogo gibó, Mo orobo ainadabuai, another said, I have married a wife.

Till, or until, is shown by the dative case of the demonstrative geda, and the future tense:

Mo gedaito nido orowameairi, till I shall return.

Imeime gedaito widumoisiodirori, until all shall be done.
There are not many interjections. The following are common:

- Iruko ! expresses surprise mingled with fear, as when one treads on a black snake in the road.
- Asa ! expresses pain, as when one is cut with a knife, or puts something hot in the mouth.
- Irio ! expresses surprise, and is used only by women.
- Wooi ! expresses surprise or pleasure, and is followed by a word expressing appreciation of the thing seen, or of disgust, as may be.

Other interjections are:

- O' ! of surprise; Uu ! Oh ! Eke ! of displeasure; Uwee ! Woe ! Sanou ! Hold on ! Stop a bit !

The affirmative is Io ! Yes ! The negative is Puai ! No !

Ro ubi iga rerea obo kodio gido ? Do you wish to drink water? (Your wishing [is it] water for drinking?) The answer is Io ! yes!

In the translation of the Gospels Nuwaimigiro ! is used for Hail! (lit. Let Him live!)

NUMERALS.

The Kiwai language had only two numerals: nau, one; netewa, two. Three was expressed by joining these and adding the suffix -bi. Netewa-netewa was used for four. All the English numerals have been introduced, and are now in general use for numbers above two, but one and two are used in counting hundreds and thousands. These words are not spelled phonetically, hence: nain, fourteen, eighty, two hundred, five thousand, etc.

Some particles affixed to nouns, pronouns and verbs are equivalent to numerals:

- Suffixed to nouns: -ro, one; -toribo, two; -potoro, three.
- Suffixed to pronouns: -to, two; -ibi, three.
- Suffixed to verbs: -do, two; -ama, two; -bi or -ibi, three.

Repetition of the numeral implies separation: nau nau, one by one, one at a time; netewa netewa, in twos.

There are no ordinal numbers, position in order being shown by local nouns (paragraph 196) used in a paraphrase: gopeito, first, in front; ipiwa, in the middle; waporudo, last. Ianana is also used for last in time; waporuarudo, the very last.

A multiplicative may be shown by the word tagu, time: netewa tagu ito, at two times, i.e., twice; netewa naubi tagu ito, three times.

The numerals are used as adjectives and precede a noun, the numeral particles being redundant: nau duburo one man; netewa dubu toribo, two men; netewa naubi sai ito, on the three (i.e., third) day.
The intensive particles may be added to the numerals: nauia, only one.

SYNTAX.

The Sentence.

211. The position of words in the Kiwai sentence has been indicated generally under the several divisions of the Grammar. The principal rules of syntax may be collected as follows:—

1. The Subject precedes the verb or predicate:
   Mere radau, the child runs away; nou gadau, he ran away; mai nimioribowari, I will get up.

   A noun Subject may have a pronoun in apposition:
   Padi nei garogorumo, the cuscus (pl.) said.

2. The direct Object immediately precedes the verb but follows the Subject:
   Sido maramu gorumai, Sido his mother called.
   Neigo nou godomatidirorumo, they him watched.

3. A word modifying the subject or object precedes:
   Sido gabo, Sido's road; auwo kuraere, big stone; didiri kiriwoto, murder (lit. men killing); keregedio dubu, working man.

4. The definite numerals, also ata, arua and sirio precede the noun; patu, gabugabu and sirioro follow. Imeime may precede or follow.

5. Extensions of the predicate usually precede the verb, but may follow.

6. Expressions of time usually appear at the beginning of the Sentence.

7. Infinitive phrases appear at the end of the Sentence:
   Nimo ubi airiria Mabia keaurigido, we wish (lit. our wishes remain) to see Mabia.

8. The particles aime, ina, bia and the negative pai immediately precede the verb.

The Verbal Complex.

212. The elements of the verbal complex appear in the following order:—

a. Elements preceding the verbal word-base:
   1. The assertive particle ai. The prefix k.
   2. The particle of incomplete action go. The imperative signs: auto, aug-, d-, aigod-, numad-, daug-, betug-. The permissive signs nuai-, nuaim-. The conditional bia- or biat.
   3. The personal signs n-, r-, g-, w-.

   These immediately precede the verbal base, except in the future and habitual tenses. In the future the combined signs for tense and number of agents are joined to the sign of person by the vowel *; and follow the personal sign.

In the habitual present and past a or aa is joined to the personal sign. In the future habitual a or aa is substituted for the final o of the sign showing the number of agents.

b. The Verbal Word-Base:

This may begin with any vowel or diphthong, i indicating a plural object (paragraphs 54-97). The prefixes used in the compound bases are not separated from the base by any other particles. They are prefixed in the following order: em and im precede ar and ow; er and ir precede em or im; or and ir precede ow or iw; ow and iw may precede ar or ir.

c. Elements following the verbal word-base:

1. Particles showing dual or trial objects. Postpositions added to the participle. The negatives -tato or -tatoime.

2. The signs of present or past tense, duru, ru.

3. The particles showing plural or dual agents, mo, do. The particle bi showing trial agents is prefixed to the tense sign.

4. The future sign ri. The emphatic particles ro, go, ime, i, etc. These when used are always at the end of the verbal complex.

213. As a rule the verbal complex forms a single word, but for ease in reading the texts hyphens have been introduced where natives often write the parts as though separate words.

In a few rare instances the preceding or following particles may be separated by a noun. Some examples are:

- Gaarumo-ubago-owaiwadogo, (they) were always causing trouble (uba, bad).
- Aigaarudo simarasisimara eresei, (they) two were badly disposed towards each other.
- Rimi-tu-idobiari, he will dip his hand (tu, hand).

The words in the Kiwai-English Vocabulary were nearly all collected by E. Baxter Riley. S.H.R. has added a few from the texts and translations. Many names of plants and living creatures have been omitted.
Note on Verbal Forms.

Verbs are entered under the simple form of the word-base when this is known, i.e., under the vowels a, e, i, o, u. Compounds immediately follow. The plural word-base, with prefix i-, usually appears with the singular, but in some cases will only be found under i-. Cf. paragraphs 95-96 of Grammar.

Some compounds will be found only under the prefixes: ar, em, emar, emow, er, erem, im, imar, imow, ir, irim, iriw, irow, iw, iwar, or, oror, ow, owar, and owor.

The word-base will be found by disregarding the following initial letters or syllables in words found in the texts:

Dyes.

Yellow (Agoago), from stem of Agoago plant.
Black (Uibu), from grass buried in mud for three or four days, then taken out and rubbed with Gamamu leaves.
Red (Dogodogo), by rubbing with the skin of the Bumo fruit, also by rubbing with the skin of Iriri fruit.
